Sends Walmer of San Diego to Death.

He Claims He Was Innocent of the Crime.

A Belief Exists that He Was the Tool of a Lot of Unprincipled Scoundrels.

Much, Mystery Surrounds the Case It Being Thought to be Part of a Widespread Swind-ling Scheme.

SAN DIEGO, March 9—Special Dispatch.) The suickle of J. Walmer at noon today by a dose of strychnine, taken before entering his home, and assisted by a self-administered dose of chloroform which his wife endeavored to snatch away from the doomed man as he entered the house, has at last stimulated the county prosecuting officer to arrest Frank Ethridge, who is implicated with Walmer in tender ing Charles N. Clark a forged deed of property for $2300. Ethridge was arrested this afternoon and released on $2000 bail. Walmer was arrested yeserday, charged with forging the deed.

The charge worried him into ending his life with poison. He was conscious until a few minutes before ueath, maintaining that he took chloroform merely to secure needed sleep; that he was innocent of forgery and in quired why the officers did not seek parties in San Francisco, who were the instigators of the criminal at-It is believed that Waimer was the tool of Frank Ethridge and others. There is considerable mystery in the case yet to be solved. Ethridge almits that he drew up the forged decided and the contract accompanying it, and that Walmer sent the same to San Francisco for the signature of B. Etcheverry, owner of the land. It was returned by the Bank of California to the Merchants National Bank here in escrow, John F. Lyons No. 007 Montgomery street. San Francisco, being the notary acknowledging Etcheverry's signature. William Rogers, assistant cashler of the Merchants National Bank, told Clark, the would-be-purchaser of the land, that he knew Etcheverry's signature and that the signature on the dead was genuine. Clark discovered that Etcheverry had been in France two years, and that ool of Frank Ethridge and others. been in France two years, and that the signature was a forgery. Walmer produced letters, presumably received from Etcheverry, but these letters pointed clearly to Walmer as the forger, as the filing indorsements on the letters in Walmer's handwriting, were almost identical to Etcheverry's signature. District Attorney Sweet was reluctant to arrest Walmer, but reputable real estate men pressed him to do so. On Thursday, and without instructions, the Merchants National Bank returned the deed to San Francisco. On Friday the District Attorney, being pressed by real estate dealers, where the Bank of California, and the Chief of Police at San Francisco,

He has been closely associated with C. E. Mayne, who was president of the San Diego Pacific Railroad, which The Times exposed recently as a pronounced fake scheme. The opinion prevails that Walmer, who was regarded as a dull Walmer, who was regarded as a dull but unreliable man, was the tool, possibly, of Ethridge and of other fakers, who may be interested in a wide-spread scheme at San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego to fleece non-resident investors by means of forged deeds and mortgages.

forged deed, purporting to have been signed by B. Etcheverry, are accumulating rapidly. Last evening a warrant was issued charging J. Walmer with forgery. He was taken before Justice Bryan and admitted to ball in $2000, M. Hall, Frank Gordon and Frank Schmidt becoming his bondsmen, whereupon he was released.

This morning Walmer was at his office in the Lawyers' Block, as usual, but declined to discuss the forgery matter, except to repeat a positive denial that he was guilty of forgery.

About 11 o'clock he disappeared from his office, and a few minutes past 1 o'clock this afternoon there came the report, fully verified, that he had committed suicide.

Inquiry showed that after leaving the office he had gone to his residence at No. 722 Second street. On arriving he told his wife he was ill, and going to his room, lay down upon his bed, but without removing his clothes. A few minutes later Mrs. Walmer saw the illness was serious and called Dr. Luscomb, who lives but a few doors away. Walmer soon went into spasms and expired at about 1 o'clock, various physicians who had been in consultation being unable to save him. They agree that death was due to strychnine polsoning, accompanied by a heavy draught of chloroform.

Walmer leaves a widow and a son 2 years old. They formerly lived at Cincinnati, where they have relatives. After Walfier's death, Frank Ethridge was arrested on the charge of complicity in the attempted fraud. He was held in $2000 bonds, furnished by A. G. Gassen and Charles Pauley. Other warrants are out and it is expected to prove that a wide-reaching

The ex-President returned from Richmond, Saturday last, where he had been gaged for forty-one days in trying the Morrison will case, in an enterpled condition and suffering from a heavy cold. On Thursday he got up for a short time, but was soon compelled to return to bed. Whether he caught additional cold when he left his bed is not known, but pleurodina developed and for several hours he suffered in-tensely. He is also suffering from acute bronchitis and hi left lung is considerably

Trouble Feared Over the Disagree ment Between the Agency Officials and the Indians Over a Suit.

Affairs have been disturbed on the reservation for some weeks on account of the disagreements between the officials and the Indians. The Indian Court, in the case of Indian offenses, has exercised powers which the Indians claim were arbitrary. The matter was brought to an issue in a civil case in the Justice Court here, when Wet Soot, brought suit against Brisbough and others to recover damages for an alleged assault committed by the Indian policemen.

The case was decided in favor of the plaintiff, but was appealed by United States Dist.-Atty. Murphy to the State Circuit Court. Shortly after Chiefs No Shirt, Young Chief and twenty other head men were arrested for dancing contrary to the agent's orders. This caused a riot in the council chamber and a general row was narrowly averted. The chiefs were released, but were again arrested on the same charge and also for resisting United States officers. This the Indians promised to do and the head men say they will use their influence to prevent any disturbance. The only fear expressed is that the Indians may get drunk and get into trouble with the Indian police.

Stone of the People's Home mittee selected by the bondholders of he Los Angeles Consolidated Electric Railway Company to reorganize that company, have had daily meetings for a week past, and have definitely agreed upon a plan. It was sent to the printer today and will be ready for distribution by next week. The provisions of the trust articles will be fully carried out, only that two-thirds of the bondholders, instead of one-third, as required by the trust deed, will agree to the change. The road will be sold under foreclosure proceedings. It will be disposed of to the highest bidder, which will probably be the bondholders' combination. A new company will then be organized and the old stock replaced by the new company. The bondholders who do not join in the foreclosure may receive a small sum for their holdings, as they will pro-rate only on the proceeds of the sale, while the syndicate will own the plant.

The bond issue aggregates $3,000. 000. Small holdings will swell the amount controlled by the syndicate to 82,600,000 at least, and possibly it will be made unanimous. The reorganiza-tion will occur on the 16th inst.

They were all in court today when argument was heard over admitting a certified copy of the stolen will. The matter went over for a week as the Judge was unable to render a decision on account of the novel points of law raised.

Counsel for Charles Fair are in a very embarrassing position as, if they knock out the present will which was filed, they may have sprung upon them another will, which will be even harsher in its provisions. Then Mr. North of Alameda wanted to amend it by making any lease given by the Harbor Commisnable and by striking out the clause limiting the rental to the nomimal sum of $1000 a year.

Mr. Powers of San Francisco, who has led the fight for the new road, stated that the matter of putting the rent at $1000 was because the laws forbid the granting of subsidies. Tickets are Contracts.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Judge Adams today decided the case of Mulford & Mackensie, the ticket brokers, against the Chicago and Alton Railroad, finding the issue for the plaintiffs and fixing their damages at $10,854. Mulford & Mackensie were the firm of brokers who in 1880 had an office in this city and in St. Louis. In that year they bought of the Alton road $50,000 worth of tickets at 50 cents on the dollar, the tickets being good over the Alton between Kansas City and Bloomington, thence East over the Lake Erie and Western. Shortly after the purchase of the tickets, a passenger rate war set in and for two years the tickets were unsalable. In June, 1882, after the brokers had disposed of about half of the tickets, the Lake Erie and Western, which had gone into the hands of a receiver, reported that the agreement between itself and the Alton, by which the tickets had been made good over that line cast of Bloomington, was dissolved and the tickets became worthless. Judge Adams held in effect that the tickets were contracts made by the Alton.

VALE, CITRUS FAIR.

The Orange and Lemon Exhibition is Ended.

The Gold-medal Winners Sent Away to Gov. McKinley of Ohio.

Protestant Orphans Entertained—Th Exhibition Was not a Financial Success—Some Closing Ceremonies.

The Citrus Fair is over. Ten days of hustle and excitement have passed over Hazard's Pavillon, and now its glories are rapidly departing—most of them in boxes and on trucks. Yesterday was full of the and on trucks. Yesterday was full of the excitement of closing. Some of the less prominent fruit was already being boxed, and the officials were about the busiest men in Los Angeles, with all the work that crowded in upon them.

The superintendents were working nineteen to the doxen, filling out checks for the premiums and settling all accounts.

about ninety in number, were the guests of the Citrus Fair yesterday afternoon. The children were marched in orderly double file through the building before being seated for the concert. They behaved very well, and seemed to enjoy to the full the beautiful sights around them.

THE MEDAL WINNERS. The great event of the closing day of the fair was the "passing of the box." The committee decided to hold over the gold medal box of oranges until the afternoon, that it might start of with greater eclatures the confinent. upon its journey across the continent.

The box was carefully repacked, the ranges being wrapped in fresh tissue paper, and was exhibited all the afternoon upon the Highland table, with the gold medal in its purple case of velvet beside it.

At 5 o'clock it was taken to the office and nailed up, after the blue ribbon, the gold medal placard and a marked copy of the Friday Times had been laid on the top of the oranges. It was then placed in a carriage containing J. H. Yerkes, the packer, resplendent with the gold medal; W. H. Grow, representative of the locality in which the oranges grew, and J. R. Newbury, vice-president of the Republican Club.

hury, vice-president of the Republican Club.

A tally-ho, drawn by four smart grays, was in readiness to carry the band directly after the carriage, and another tally-ho containing the Jonathan Club brought up the rear of the procession.

The plan was to serenade the various newspaper offices and then go to Wells, Fargo & Co. to start the box off in a blaze of glory upon its journey to Ohio.

So the committee proposed, but—alas!—the band disposed.

The intentions of all were good, but, in the hurry of the closing day, there was an all-around misunderstanding.

The committee had spoken to the managers of the fair about securing a portion of Cassasa's Band for the occasion. The managers spoke to Cassasa, who promised two buglers.

In the afternoon the committee dis-

In the afternoon the committee discovered that the size of the "band" did not correspond with the size of the tally-ho, and sent again to Cassasa asking for at least fourteen men to fill the carriage. It was understood by them that Cassasa consented to this, and they went on with their other preparations, thinking the band question was settled.

What Cassasa did say, was, that his was, a concert band, and never appeared in a street parade; but that he would send the two buglers and enough men to fill up the carriage, it being understood that the latter were for ornament alone, and that

Cassas told his men to "west for the wagon," and went away downtown, serenely confident that his cherished band would do as they were told, like good boys.

The tally-ho drew up in front of the Pavilion at 5 o'clock and the entire band sallied forth and packed themselves in, a

The Jonathan Club was late, and the committee was busy over the composition of a letter to Gov. McKinley. So, after waiting a few minutes, the band requested to know the reason of the delay. The coachman replied that he was waiting for his orders, whereupon he was told that his orders were to drive immediately to the Hoffman House.

He did so, and unloaded the band before its hospitable doors; then was sent back to the stable with the tally-ho.

its hospitable doors; then was sent back to the stable with the taily-ho. In the meantime, the Jonathan Club had arrived and the committee was out with vengetance in its eye looking for one band, which was evidently loet, stolen or strayed. No band was forthcoming, so the procession started, minus music. The box was conveyed with all due haste and ceremony to the office of Wells, Fargo & Co., where it was delivered into the hands of the agent, who premised to regard it as the orange of his eye until it should have safely reached its destination.

The committee, after the box was disposed of, went to make a friendly call at the Hoffman House. A row of brass horns greeted them, but those who had erstwhile made these horns as living things were scattered "like leaves of the forest when autumn has blown" in as many directions as they could conveniently manage.

rections as they could conveniently manage.

What the committee wants to know is if Cassasa did not want the band to parade, why he did not say so in plain English, and so give them time to get another band. What Cassasa wants to know is, how in the world these benighted people of Los Angeles ever could think it possible that his imcomparable concert band would stoop to a street parade.

What the overworked managers of the fair want to know is, what in the name of all the citrus fruits the fuss is about, anyway.

what the everwheel managers of the fair want to know is, what in the name of all the citrus fruits the fuss is about, anyway.

They all took it very good-naturedly, however, and all was peace at the Pavilion in the evening.

The box went of its way, *companied by a formal letter of presentation, explaining the facts that are already familiar to readers of this paper.

The evening's entertainment opened with the presentation of a large floral harp to Mr. Cassasa by the exhibitors. The base of the harp was made of calla lilles; the post of roses and smilax, and the back of scarlet geraniums. The strings were of silver cord and interlaced among them was a band of wide, white ribbon, bearing the words: "Citrus Exhibitors to Cassasa Band."

After the "Leonora" overture, C. D. Willard stepped out upon the platform, followed by F. Wiggins, F. L. Alles and Mr. Rudisill.

Mr. Willard, with a short speech of thanks to the band for their excellent service, presented Mr. Cassasa with a gold medal, the gift of all the exhibitors.

The medal is unique in design. From a scroll of frosted gold, with "Cassasa" engraved upon it, depends a silver stem, bearing two orange leaves of delicately veined and frosted silver, and a halfornange of burnished gold, engraved with the words: "Los Angeles Citrus Fair, 1895. From Exhibitors." Mr. Cassasas replied in a few well-chosen words.

At the closs of the duet by W. E. and Mrs. Batter, the fair cornetist was handed a large palm-leaf overlaid with roses and smilax, and inclosed in a network of silver threads as a slight acknowledgment of her ready and gracious responses to

of her ready and gradious responses to many encores.

The medal was designed by Joseph Morton, who also designed and made the hery and fan, with the aid of D. Carpenter. Everything is wound up and closed. The pretty booths are descreed.

The "Land of Sunshine" shone bravely till the last. The luncheon and lemonade booths gathered in many sheckels, as did also the Ladies' Assistance League, at the little booth where candy and flowers were exchanged for many a bright dollar that will go to the aid of the poor and needy. The King's Daughters ought to have taken in more than they did, and it is hoped that the worthy charity for which they have worked so hard will receive substantial aid in many other ways. The rair is done, but the memory of its brightness will linger in the hearts of the people for many a day, and visitors from the Bast will have a tale of sunny skies and golden fruit to carry home that will be a still further reveletion of the boundless resources of the "Italy of America."

This was resisted by Senator Cockrell, who insisted that it was too late to do anything with the repeal and that it had been amended satisfactorily. The Western Senators rallied round Senator Hansbrough in advocacy of striking out the Dockery provision. Senator Cockrell made a -point of order, but the Vice-President overruled it. The vote was taken, but the result being in doubt, the Vice-President was about to call for a division when several Senators protested and asked for a viva voce vote again. This was taken and the Vice-President decided with Mr. Hansbrough. Had there been a voting quorum present Mr. Cockrell would have called for a nay and yea vote, but he was too anxious to get through with the bill that night. While the bill was in conference the Western Senators said that if the Hansbrough amendment was not retained there would be a great deal of talk on the report in the Senate, with the possibilities of a disagreement, and Mr. Dockery was compelled to yield one result of his commission.

Railroad Lands.

Railroad Lands.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Secretary Smith has determined that no more patents for land granted the subsidized railroads shall be issued until there has been a settlement of the debt due the government, from these roads. An attempt was made to get a resolution to this effect through Congress, but it failed. As soon as the resolution was presented, Commissioner Liamorcaux of the General Land Office, immediately suspended work upon the preparation of lists of lands within the grants, and none were sent to the Secretary for approval while the resolution was pending. Afterward, when Congress adjourned, the Commissioner felt compelled to go ahead with the patenting of lands to the Union and Central Pacific roads, but, with the announcement of the Secretary that he will not approve any further patents to these roads, work was grain suspended.

Secretary Smith will, in a short time, make an order to that effect and give reasons for such action. He says that he thinks it just that no more patents should be granted when the roads owe the government such large sums. It has been shated that a suit for mandamus to compel the Secretary to continue issuing patents will that a suit for mandamus to compel the Secretary to continus issuing patents will be brought by the restroads. When this was suggested to Secretary Smith today he said that it would be time enough to begin work on patents when the courts granted such mandamus. The lands affected are within the grants to the Union Pacific and Central Pacific between Omaha and Sacramento. It is also thought that the lands within the grant to the Oregon and Cafffornia road will be affected, as it is operated as a part of the Central Pacific s operated as a part of the Central Pacific Railroad system.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Secretary Carlisle today issued an order, directing that hereafter all compensation for mail and other services rendered the govern-ment by certain non-added and leased lines of the Union Facific shall be paid to the ment by certain non-sided and leased lines of the Union Pacific shall be paid to the receivers of the respective companies, instead of being applied, as heretofore, to the sinking fund and the bond and interest account of the Union Pacific. This action is based upon the decisions of the counts and the showing made that these roads are not now under the authority or control of the Union Pacific, and that the retention of the compensation, earned is lilegal.

None of the payments authorized are to be made except on the filing with the Treasury Department of a properly-certified order of the court, appointing the person or persons named in the said order, receiver or receivers of the said respective companies.

This order is to apply to all payments for compensation for service rendered since the appointment of said receivers and which have been heretofore withheld awaiting the action of the Treasury Department and to all other payments to the respective companies until further ordered.

STOCKTON, March 9.—By midnight plans were made for the pursuit of the three bandists who held up the east-bound overland, known as the European Mail, at 10:30 last night. A posse was quickly gathered, and the veteran Sheriff of the county, who was absent at the State cent. county, who was absent at the State capicounty, who was absent at the State capital, was brought, with an additional force of officers, in a special engine. With the aid of two bloodhounds belonging to the Sheriff, the officers are confident of striking the trail of the robbers soon. The scene of the attempted robbery is level and, for the most part, under cultivation. Alongside the track it is swampy, and it is probable, the bandits escand, by a good Alongside the track it is swampy, and it is probable the bandits escaped by a good road, especially as they had a horse and buggy. When the train was stopped and the engineer and fireman were forced to go to the express car, the bandits fired repeatedly toward the passenger coaches, as a warning to inquisitive travelers.

The tramp who was stealing a ride on the baggage car is the only person who can give a description other than general of any of the robbers.

It is explained that the reason why the robbers made no attempt to open the safe was the short time at their disposal. The Oregon express was only an hour behind and they had to finish the job before that train approached, or run great risks of being captured.

ON THEIR TRAIL.

ON THEIR TRAIL. STOCKTON, March 9.—Sheriff Cunning-ham and his men are said to be on the trail of the robbers who held up the Cennam and his men are said to be on the trail of the robbers who held up the Central Pacific mail train near Castle switch last night.

The officers now believe there were four men in the job. The two men who were on the train boarded it at Tracy. They were supposed to be tramps. The trainmen had intended to put them off here, but when the train pulled in they left the car only to jump aboard again when the train pulled out. At the switch where the hold-up occurred, a third man walked out of the brush. That was evidently the signal, for immediately upon seeing him the two men who had been riding on the bagagae car, and who had by that time climbed upon the tender, commanded the engineer to stop the train. The tracks of a horse and buggy, which had evidently been hitched at Armstrong switch, a few miles north of Castle switch, were found by the officers this morning. The buggy had evidently been driven in the direction of Lodi, but after going a short distance beyond the Armstrong switch, it was turned and driven toward this city.

LODI, March 9.—There have been many detectives in town today, but up to the present time very little news relative to the train robbery has been made apparent. At daybreak Sheriff Cunningham and Deputies Wall, Black and others were on the trail and the first train from Sacramento brought Detectives Gard, Hume, Ahern and Snyder. Cunningham and Wall found a place two miles from Lodi, where a buckboard with an inch and one-eighth tires, 'a feet 9 inches between the wheels, had been tied for some time, and traced the vehicle from the track to Cherokee Lane going toward Stockton. Another posse going north found a nest of four hobos who said that at early morning three men in a buckboard coming from Lodi had asked the road to Sacramento. Detectives Gard, Hume and other officers at once followed the trail north, while the remaining officers, dividing into posses, went into the tules to search for the robbers. Detective Hume, in conversation, said that four men had done the job and thinks they were the same men who held up the train near Sacramento a week ago, as the description of one and the buggy were the same. There are about twenty regular and amateur officers on the hunt of rithe men. It is reported that $1000 reward has been offered for the arrest and conviction of the highwaymen. George Gard has the measurement of footsteps, found near where the buggy was tied and also two 32-callber cartridges also found there, which were evidently dropped by the robbers while reloading their weapons after the hold-up.

Downey, 12 miles southeast of Los Angeles on the Southern California Railroad, with about 1200 inhabitants, is located in one of the richest and most productive valleys in California, known as the Ranchito or Los Nictos Valley.

A milder, more delightful climate cannot be found in the State. We have blackberries, strawberries and nearly all kinds of vegetables the year round.

Downey has five churches. Her lodges are the Masonic, Odd Fellows, Rebekah, A.O.U. W., Good Templars and Foresters. Within a radius of three miles we have seven pub-lic schools. Only 55c for a round-trip ticket to Loa Angeles, the city which is destined to be the largest west of the Rocky Mountains. We have five daily passenger trains in and out of Los Angeles. A number of people do business in Los Angeles and live in Downey, Many of the young men and young ladies from this town and vicinity attend the business college daily in the city, returning at night.

I have for sale choice improved farms set in walnuts, oranges, grapes, figs, lemons, apples, peaches, pears, affaifa and all classes of citrus and deciduous fruits.

I have many ranches for sale in Artesia. I miles south of Downey, in a belt that requires but little or no irrigation. After cutting the barley off we raise 50 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre on the came land, besides the pumpkins, beets and citrons—there is no end to them, and for hos and hominy this valley beats the State.

This valley shipped 175 carloads of walnuts last season. We shelled and sacked 250,900 bushels of corn last year. Downey will ship 75 carloads of oranges this season. Many of them cannot be excelled by Riverside. Rivera, 3 miles above, will ship 200 cars.

Our alfalfa land will produce 1 to 2 tons per acre each cutting; can cut 5 to 9 times a year; harley, 2 to 4 tons per acre. When planted early our corn will turn out 75 to 160 bushels per acre. This is the finest place in the State for a cannery. It is also the finest section in the State for the dairy business. We have aine creameries and two cheese factories in a radius of eight miles.

A water-right of 100 miner's inches goes with every ranch I sell, and costs 8 1-3c per hour while irrigating. We have more water for irrigating than any place in California.

Within a radius of 8 miles we have 17 water companies.

CRUSHED UNDER A CAR.

A CABLE-CAR CONDUCTOR MEETS A SUDDEN FATE.

A. W. Irving in Stepping from One Car to Another Fell to His Death Last Night About

A. W. Irving, a cable-car conductor, whose home was at No. 2116 East First duty last night about 10:30 o'clock.

Irving was in charge of a car of the Boyle Heights and Westlake division and Boyle Heights and Westlake division and was on the return trip from Boyle Heights. The car had reached a point a short distance east of Alameda street, near Rose street, and Irving, who was on the dummy, started to step back upon the trail car.

In doing so his foot must have slipped, for he fell between the trailer and the dummy. Gripman Brown stopped the car as quickly as possible, but it was too late to save the life of the conductor.

The lifeless form was picked out from where it had become entangled with the framework and Dr. Choate, who happened to be near by, made an examination. He pronounced the man dead and he was taken to the police station in the patrol-wagon.

It was found that Irving's neck was broken and his chin bore the appearance of having been struck a sharp blow with some blunt instrument. The heel on one of his shoes appeared to have been run over by a wheel of the car, but it is thought the wheels did not run over his head.

Coroner Campbell was notified and he ordered the body removed to an undertaking establishment. The deceased was a married man and leaves a widow, but no children.

Ex-Councilman Hugh Smith, who keeps the saloon at the northeast corner of First and Los Angeles streets, will have to answer in the Police Court tomorrow—either in proper person or through his barkeeps—to the charge of selling Equor in violation of the crdinance.

At 12:30 o'clock, midnight, when Sunday was half an hour old, Officer Baker saw two or three men knocking for admittance to Smith's saloon, and when the side door was opened the officer went inside with the men. He found a number of men inside, and some of them at the bar drinking.

His Views with Reference to Pros-pects for Future Legislation for This Section.

In the course of the interview Se White expressed trimself as follows:

"With reference to the prospect future legislation in the interests of particular section of the country, I

"Mamy of the older Semators on the committee have, because of representation made to them long ago, inclined to Sant Monica. The admitted advantages of the point for a seaside resort have brought more prominently before the public, and there has been undue haste to concludate the preferable watering-place mube a desirable site for a deep-sea harbor The investigations and personal discussion that have been in progress during the layear have done much, I believe, to elet the atmosphere, and the fact that both the Senators and Congressmen from this district, as well as the government enginess together with an overwhelming majorty of the people immediately interested, in unequivocably in favor of San Pedro, presents a condition which I do not thin can be overcome.

"I am strongly of the opinion that a majority of the nine remaining member of the Commerce Committee are for Sa Pedro, and there is no reason to suppose that the new membership will botherwise.

"As to the House, I can say nothing."

of the Commerce Committee are for Sap Pedro, and there is no reason to sup pose that the new membership will be otherwise.

"As to the House, I can say nothing, hope that we will be able to get a Call fornia member upon the River and Harbor Committee. This, however, will red in the discretion of Mr. Reed, who will un doubtedly be the next Speaker. It muse understood that river and harbor bill uniformly originate in the House.

"As to the railroad legislation before Congress there is little to say, except the she struggle to enact a funding bill as well as a railroad pooling bill will, in doubt, be renewed, and I am afraid that he next House will look favorably upon both measures, unless the people at large beatir themselves.

"The pooling bill passed the house, and would have become a law had not several of us expressed our determination to tall it to death. When Mr. Reilly, rallying from his defeat in the House, proposed modified measure, one of the leading members of his committee asked me what would do if the bill came to the Senate. answered that I would feel compelled to exhaust the subject.

"The session was so near a conclusion that one Senator, under our somewhat eccentric rules, had the power during the last week to dispose of any obnoxious measure. The pendency of the appropriation bills made this easy.

"I procured an amendment to one of the appropriation bills made this easy.

"I procured an amendment to need the second form of the Federal building. The Assistant Secretary of the Treasury thought that the department had the power to do the work out of the general repair fund.

"This I doubted, and I told him that preferred to have a written opinion, as the improvement's might be assumed.

This I doubted, and I told him that preferred to have a written opinion, as that the improvements might be assured. He took the matter under advisement and finally decided that the alterations could not be made without a special appropriation; and almost at the last minute I got the fitem inserted.

"I believe that if we had no Federal building at all, there would not be much the ftem inserted.

"I believe that if we had no Federa's building at all, there would not be much difficulty in obtaining a sufficient allowance to erect an adequate structure; but notwithstanding this. I have hopes that the delegation will be able to improve the present property by means of a sufficient allowance at the next long session.

"I am very anxious to see Senator Perkins placed on the Appropriations Committee, for the member of that most important part of the Senate organization nearest to the Pacific Coast, is Senator Teler of Colorado.

"Several members of the Committee on Commerce and other leading Senators will visit us from time to time during this vacation. Senator-select Elkins, who is now in Mexico, told me three weeks ago that he would be in Los Angeles about March 20. Perhaps all of the Senators who are coming here are new to this Coast; and their presence cannot but be beneficial."

Slugs of Lead. Slugs of Lead.

An exciting shooting affray occurred at Jean Lenert's restaurant adjoining his saloon on Ferguson alley, at 7 o'clock last evening. Three pistol shots were fired, but no one was hurt.

Quite a number of people were eating supper at the time in the restaurant, which is a room large enough to seat about twenty people at table, and among them was George Green, who, the police say, is a disreputable character.

pistol at Green and fire three shots in quick succession.

Judging from the bullet marks on the wall of the room the first shot was fired while Green was sitting and he then jumped up, and the last two bullets were fired in a different direction, but yet so as to be in range of his head.

Scarcely had the third bullet left the ristol in the woman's hand before Officer Steele, who chanced to be near by, placed her under arrest and sent her to the police station. The revolver which she had was found to contain four cartridges three of which had been discharged.

The woman gave her name as Carrie Smith and stated she was employed in a dressmaking establishment. It is supposed that some previous trouble between the two led to the deed.

Commenting upon a suggestion which was recently made by The Times in regard to the form and size of the proposed local bond issues, the Investor says:

"A suggestion made by The Times that our local bond issues should be made in a form and size to attract local investors, and the money paid out for interest be thus kept at home instead of being sent abroad, would be an excellent idea for adoption, but for the little difficulty that would arise with the county and city assessors. Those officials would insist upon taxes being paid upon such property, and the owner of a 4½ per cent. bond would consequently net about 2 per cent. on his investment. If municipal and county bonds could be exempted from taxation there would be an excellent market for such securities at home."

COMMERCIAL

In connection with the call which has been issued to the manufacturers of the State to assemble in San Francisco of the 19th of this month, it is stated the careful statistics show that the manufac-turing output of California has fallen off 50 per cent. in the last five years. The chief cause of this is attributed by the erce' to the reduction of 40 per cen freight rates from the East within is concerned, and, to some extent, in other lifornia cities also, the Eastern manu turers have killed the boot and sho trade, the cigar business, the clothing business, the manufacture of grain bags, carriages, harness and wagons, while foundries and machine shops are in a state foundries and machine shops are in a state of stagnation.

The manufacturers hope, by concerted action and interchange of trade as far as possible, as well as by the influence laboring men can wield with labor in general, to start a revival of local manufactures. They hope to show the retailer that if that idle 50 per cent of labor could be employed—of which there is no doubt, if retailers would patronize home manufactures, and consumers would attend to their end of the business—this idleness would be dissipated.

San Francisco manufacturers are looking forward to manufacturers from other parts of the State co-operating to this end. The idea at present is to form a central organization in San Francisco, with branches in the various parts of the State, parts of the State co-operating to this end. The idea at present is to form a central organization in San Francisco, with branches in the various parts of the State, in favor of home industries.

A good many instances have been furnished of the short-sighted policy which prevails in California in regard to the support, or rather lack of support, of local industries. For instance, in San Francisco the Pioneer Woolen Mills are idle. Californians are buying Eastern blankets, altifough these blankets are made of Californian wool. Our wool is shipped back East in the grease, a profit is paid to the wool commission-house in the East, another profit to the scourer, freight to the mill and freight on the manufactured article to the commission-houses in New York City, who again sell to jobbers and then we pay the freight back to this Coast. Then, again, take the question of feather. California produces vast quantities of hides every year, yet they are shipped to the Atlantic coast, manufactured into shoes, there and then shipped the stock from which the bides come.

The convention in San Francisco will accomplish much good if it should arouse the people of the State to the importance of patronizing home products. They are starting clubs in various cities, with the avowed purpose of increasing the population. Thus, San Francisco has a 500,000 club and Fresno a 100,000 club. The best way to accomplish this purpose is to get up a "home-product club," the members of which will bind themselves to give she preference to articles of home production, and to insist that the merchanter of which will bind themselves to give she preference to articles of home production, and to insist that the merchanter of which will bind themselves to give she preference to articles of home production, and to insist that the merchanter of which will bind themselves to give she preference to articles of home production, and to insist that the merchanter of which will bind themselves to give she preference to articles of home production in the same trees are in bloom, their fluffy, pearly white blossoms forming a pretty contrast to the dark green of the leaves. Of late years several new varieties of eucalyptus have been introduced in this section besides the eucaylptus globulus, or blue gum, which until recently was the only gum, which until recently was the only variety in the State, outside of experiwariety in the State, outside of experiment stations and a few private gardens. Some of these varieties have blossoms which are entirely different in color and shape from those of the blue gum. Among others which may be noticed in and around Los Angeles is a variety that bears a blossom in the shape of a cluster of ittle yellow balls, about the size of peas. Some of this foliage has been utilized with good effect in decorations at the fair. Other varieties of eucalyptus have a red foliage, varying all the way from pale plant to bright erimson. During the past few years the red gum, iron-bark gum and other varieties have been extensively planted along the streets and in gardens. They are, all of them, more graceful than the blue gum, although it is claimed that no variety has been found which is so well adapted for commercial purposes, that is to say for the production of fuel, as the common blue gum.

We recently had something to say in the commercial column on the subject of raising the eucalyptus for fuel, showing that it is a most profitable industry, as well as one which requires very little labor or expense. When it is considered that at a ment stations and a few private gardens. Some of these varieties have blossoms low estimate a blue-gum grove close to the city will yield at the rate of not less than $50 a year net from the time it is planted, or, as some cleim, more than this, it is remarkable that more of the vacant land around Los Angeles has not been utilized in this manner. It is also remarkable that land which would pay big interest oh $500 an acre is still offered at one-third of that price. A gum grove close to the city is worth a good deal more than one which is further away, not only on account of the saving in hauling the wood, but also because cheaper labor for cutting may be always procured near a city where men can go back to their homes every evening. It is true that coal, and petroleum, and gas, and electricity are to a great extent supplanting wood, but there will sliways be a good demand for a certain amount of wood for fuel, and a grove which is located close to a city will sliways have an advantage in supplying the market. The brick yards must have wood, and these alone are able to consume quite a large quantity.

The eucalyptus has other uses bestdes that of supplying fire-wood. From the leaves is manufactured eucalyptus oil, the medicinal qualities of which the highly valued by those who have tried it. It is a, wonderful alleviant of pain in theumatism, also in cases of bruises. The native Australians have known of the virtues of this tree from time immemorial in that country, whence it was brought to California, it lays claim to being the largest tree in the world, even excelling the giant sequoias of California, and reaches in some cases a height of over 400 feet. The oil is also used as an antiseptic in place of carboile salve. A few years ago there was a factory in Los Angeles which produced eucestyptus oil as well as a boverage that was prepared from the eucalyptus leaf. For some reasons it ceased operations a couple of years ago, but during the past few weeks another factory of a similar character has been started at Garden Grove, in Orange county. Eucalyptus oil is also made at Riverside.

recognized they will be introduced extensively.

There is not an acre of land in the fills north of the city south of the river and east of the Ivanhoe tract that is not worth $400 per acre, if for nothing else but to raise eucalyptus for fuel. This land will produce more wood to the acre than the tow-lands, even where it can be irrigated, especially after the first five years, when the roots get dayn to the decomposed sandstone that is very rich and always moist. The wood raised here is worth at least $2 per cord more than it would be raised ten or twelve miles away, because of the 22 per cord more than it would be raised ten or twelve miles away, because of the liffarence in hauling.

There is no fear of overdoing the market, from land near the city, as the population is increasing rapidly, and it will be neces-sary to go further away every year to get a supply.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 9.—It was 4 o'clock this morning before Harry Hayward was able to sleep. At 10 o'clock he was still sleeping. He had packed his clothing in a valise while waiting the jury's verdict. His only fear was violence from the crowd when the acquital should come. When he reached his cell and heard the verdict his first remark was: "My God, I'il have to unpack this thing now; if I don't my clothes will get wrinkled." When he was removed to a cell on the second floor he seemed to realize more fully his present situation. A day and night watch has been put over him.

the Sheriff to await examination for burglary.

The secret of the proceeding was that the two men had been kept in the "sweatbox" at the City Jail since their arrest, some eight days ago, in order that the detectives might extract some information from them.

Upon learning that the attorney for the men, W. P. Hyatt, Esq., was about to institute habeas corpus proceedings the police turned the men over to the Sheriff yesterday afternoon; consequently when the case was called for hearing at 3 o'clock the men were at the County Jail. This state of affairs being reported to Judge Shaw he took occasion, from the bench, to severely criticize the action of the police in the premises, denouncing it as a flagrant attempt to evade the process of the court.

Detective J. G. Goodman, who was the only representative of the police department present, endeavored to explain matters, but Judge Shaw was convinced that there had been some sharp practice on the part of the police, and intimated that if that sort of thing continued some one would be adjudged in contempt of court and made an example of. After an inspection of the papers in the cases against the two men, the court said that there was nothing to be done but to order the prisoners delivered to the custody of the Sheriff, which was done by Detective Goodman then and there.

BY MARGARET C. GRAHAM. OF PASADENA. Under this title Mrs. Graham has collecte

Under this title Mrs. Graham has collected several short stories of Southern California, some or which have attracted the marked attention of good readers, notably "The Withrow Water-right" and "Alex Randall's Conversion," which were printed in the Atlantic Monthly, and "Idy," which appeared in the Century.

Mrs. Graham has had ample opportunities for observing closely the characteristics of life in Southern Ualifornia, and her varied and vigorous style as a narrator enhances the local value and interest of her work.

These stories have grown out of her unique surroundings, and have much variety, vigor, independence and strong portrayal of character; and it seems safe to anticipate for them an interest and a degree of popular favor not often won by volumes of short stories.

TOPOLOBAMPO (Mexico,) March 1. (Special Correspondence.) The existence of a colony in Mexico of American freethink-ers on a communistic plan, in which soclalism is a part, is generally known. Reports have been published from time to time setting forth the troubles and hardships these people have experienced in their endeavor to follow the principles mapped out by Edward Bellamy for social political reform.

1886 about three hundred people were landed from a coast vessel on the barren lands around the Bay of Topolo-bampo, in the State of Sinaloa. Others followed, until there have come about two persons, to establish among entire product, and all public improvements and benefits were to belong to the politics, and no bosses, bossees or bossesses in their form of government. They represented nearly all civilized countries, the United States furnishing the greater number, each State having one or more rep-and doctors and ministers and men and women of the literary turn, as well as merchants, mechanics and farmers. More talent to the head has perhaps not been previously collected in a bunch. An unveloped country, a home, an ideal government, everything before them, and a cleancut past—the confidence was such that the bridges were burned behind them. It was revolution in times of peace. Revolutions are forward.

Under a conditional concession of a large

go forward.

Under a conditional concession of a large tract of land from the Mexican government to a civil engigeer, Albert K. Owens of Chester, Pa., that gentleman organized the Credit Foncier Company under the laws of Colorado. He located here and adversised. All were to have free homes. A great city was to be built close to the beautiful Bay of Topolobampo, and the rich lands extending away males to the month were to be irrigated from the Rio Fuerte through a ditch to be dug by the people and owned by them as a corporate body. There was a perfect credit system that (naured all the necessities of life. Those who labored on the dtch or on the farm were to draw from the general commissing until the dtch was complesed and the lands produced a surplus, when the luxuries of life were to be supplied tion of forty hectares minimum for each family;" viz, 98 80-100 acres. Give is good. The word is apt.

The lands thus given to each family were to be held in trust by the corporation during the life of the head of the family, and then to be held by the heirs, the fee all the time in the corporation; there being no such thing as individual ownership, those working on the farm to be paid in credit $3 per day. In cahoot with this a company was incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts to build a railroad from Topolobampo to Chihuahua, designed to be built with the labor to be paid in credits at $3 a day, or, if the laborer accepted his pay for his work in income railroad bonds at $100 each, he should receive pay at the rate of $9 a day. Its plan to raise the money to buy the necessary material and incidentally pay for labor was, first, to issue $10,000 a mile first mortgage thirty-year bonds at 5 per cent. interest; second, issue preferred stock of $10,000 a mile having a guaranteed cumulative 5 per cent. annual dividend; third, another issue of $10,000

"I vas come from To-po-lo-bam-po. I vants to go dis vay pecause it vas der longest vay. I vas one tam fool, und I vants to punish myself."

"A number of persons residing in Chicago," continued Mr. Hart, who by this time had taken to giving down quite freely, "were in sympathy with the alleged principles of the colony, and organized a company and built and shipped a portable sawmill here, with instruction to run it, keeping an account of its earnings, which were first to pay expenses, and second, the balance to the original investors. After two years had elapsed and no payments had been made, they wrote to Mr. Owens, but received no reply. The Chicago company could not open up any correspondence with the Credit Foncier Company. The Chicago company then instructed their agent to collect the amount due them and to take possession of their mill and run it in their interest, but he couldn't take possession of the mill—he was informed that the Chicago company was not a legalized body in Mexico, and that the proper steps in his case were his arrest and prosecution in the Mexican ccurts."

Any lawyer will see at a glance whom the mill belongs to. The agent of the Chicago company was a member of the Credit Foncier Company, and was estopped from saying anything about a mill. The moment he would get his hands upon it, it would become an unlawful sawmill. The title had already passed to the Credit to the content of the Credit to the content of the Credit to the content of the Credit to the credit to the content of the Credit to the cre

Question. "Mr. Hart, it seems to me almost incredible that persons of the male gender in Chicago, Ill., would walk into such a parlor as this." Answer. "The glowing accounts of his (Owens's) reform such a parlor as this." Answer. "The glowing accounts of his (Owens's) reform movement; the grandness of the conception; the benefits to the community; advanced civilization; the best sympathies of the human heart were worked upon. His statements were misleading. He has brought us together, stripped us of all we possess and reduced us to slavery, all for his own personal gain. We have attempted to arbitrate. He says he has nothing to arbitrate."

This is a sad state of facts. It is an illustration of man's inhumanity to man. By misuse of the mails hundreds of thousands of dollars have been thrown away and hundreds of families left their homes with all they had reduced to cash, and journeyed to this distant quarter of the globe, where they were robbed and enslaved, or brought back "by their friends. As the Mexican government has been drawn into this scheme, it is on the Mexican government to draw out of it, and to so far correct the error as may be possible by the exercise of its legitimate functions.

GOLD MINING.

DEVELOPING THE CLAIM-THE MODUS

the prospector patiently wields his pick round. His comrade at the top hauls up the buckets of broken rock, empties them over the dump, sharpens the tools and sends them down as required, and smokes. Commonly speaking, a "shaft" is an incline, following the dip of the ledge Sometimes a break is encountered where the surface rock has slid sidewise cutting off the ledge as smooth as if done with a knife; when this happens if it is thought the continuation of the ledge is in the foot wall the incline is continued at a less angle with the hope of intersecting the ledge at no great depth. If it is be lieved to be in the hanging wall, a shor drift is run to determine the question, if the slip is not too near the surface. seems a simple thing to find a ledge miner a "break" is a source of much anxiety. When one understands that in ordinary rock a shift is consumed in breaking and clearing two feet of ground he can see that a break where the top of the ledge has slipped twenty feet one way or the other, may entail several weeks of hard work before it is found.

It is a common maxim with miners that "no one can see further in the ground than he has a hole," and no saying is no one can see interim in the ground than he has a hole," and no saying is more true.

In hunting the ledge a man may run a drift fifty feet into the hanging wall, strike nothing; run fifty feet into the foot wall, strike nothing, and then resuming work in the drift-in the hanging wall, by the first shot uncover the ledge.

Cases have been known where shafts have been sunk hundreds of feet, parallel with and but a few feet distant from the ledge. Drifts costing thousands of dollars have been abandoned when a day's more work would have laid bare the hidden treasure.

veloping the mine, at a depth of sixtyfive feet the ledge broke and all trace was lost. About two months was spent in hunting for it, and finally it was found not twenty-five feet from the point at which it broke, and had its location been previously known ten days' work would have opened it. A body of ore was encountered, being in one place twenty-four feet in width. carrying a large proportion of ore which smelted from $100 to $200 per ton. This deposit of ore was finally exhausted, and nothing but a seam of ore, in places not thicker than a sheet of paper, indicated the presence of a vein.
For months this seam of ore was followed by drift and winze, windlassing by hand from a winze 123 feet in depth, having its mouth 200 feet below the surface. At last patience had its reward, and at a distance of over 300 feet from the last pay ore another body of pay ore was struck.
Had not the trail been "blazed" by this small seam of ore, the pay would nover have been found. It costs money to run drifts and sink winzes hundreds of feet below the surface, and if done at random
the business is disheartening to say the least.

If the miner meets no mishaps and his ledge does not break or "pinch" him, as below the surface, and if done at random the business is disheartening to say the least.

If the miner meets no mishaps and his ledge does not break or "pinch" him, as it is termed when the walls crowd together and squeeze the life out of the poor helpless stringer of pay matter, he sinks his shaft as deep as he thinks advisable, usually fifty feet, and then starts a drift along the ledge. If the ore is being worked at a profit the shaft is continued on down, and the drift is run at the same time. At 100 feet another drift is started along the ledge, and usually a "whim" is rigged, and an animal, here, mule or burno, is made to eievate the waste material. Animal power is very seldom used after a depth of 300 feet is attained, a steam or gasoline engines being substituted therefor. In countries where fuel is scarce gasoline engines are in high favor. Out at the "Lost Horse" mine near Indio, the gasoline is packed in on burros, and is considered to be the cheapest power which can at present be obtained. At the Morongo King near the Rose mine a gasoline engine is used on the hoist, and the gasoline is hauled from Victor, fifty miles, by wagon. Although at this place pinon trees are plentiful, and makes the best wood fuel in existence, the gasoline hoist is considered economical. Wood, however, is used for running the stamp mill.

The question of the hoist being arranged the development of the mine continues. Few prospectors have the means or the disposition to fully develop a mine before selling. There are so many instances on record of prospectors refusing good offers for mines partially developed and afterwards belling for a song, that few prospectors will refuse a reasonable offer. The belief that a "bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." is so predominant that a prospector who realizes over $20,000 on a single mine is as rare as a dog with five legs. Thousands of "prospecta" have been sold for little or nothing which have afterwards yinded for nothing which have afterwards yinded or nothing which have afterwards yinded of dollars profit.

When a prospector thoroughly develope a mine if must be under favorable of the pulp and saay of access. In the standard or many and the clear is and ordinartly a "custom mill" must be and easy of access. In proceeds generally without discustly. If the ledge is a sufficient width the shafts and the ledge is a faulticent width and the ledge is a fault of the sour the surface of the grains to cause them to reveal their true character.

"Flake" gold or that gold which comes in thin layers in the crevices of the ore, is the most difficult to save in the horn. One time I saw a large flake of gold about midway the pulp soon after I began horning, so I got some clear water in which to complete the operation in order to watch this flake. When the tremulous motion was given to the horn the flake of gold would rise and float in the water, and in spite of the utmost care it floated away and was lost. Some gold is so fine as to be scarcely perceptible to the naked eye. Such gold is usually hard to save, being oxidized and not capable of amalgamation unless thoroughly ground. It is also hard to horn, and an unskilled horner will get not a "color" (as each independent particle of gold is termed) and from the same rock an adept will show 100 or more colors. An old hand with the horn can tell within a few dollars how much per ton ore will run, and as the mine progresses the horn is constantly used to determine the quality of the ore.

As a good carpenter is known by his chies so its a winer known by the appears.

As a good carpenter is known by his chips so is a miner known by the appearance of his "dump."

for the people.

Here is an illustration of A. K. Owens's nerve. After it had become an established fact that this scheme was a gigautic swindle, in October of 1893, in his newspaper, the New City, edited by him. office, No. 1 Broadway, New York, room 123, and scattered over the world to lure the unsatisfied, he writes as follows:

"Today, after almost seven years of actual work in the wilds of Sinaloa, the Credit Foncier Company stands forth the most successful company that has ever been organized to advance a principle—to build, farm, town, factory and exchange upon the all-embracing plan of integral pourtry or animais. They were allowed nothing except their household effects. The people were reduced to a diet of corn meal and beans, and the volume of scrip increased, and an order issued that if not funded in thirty days its purchasing power would cease, and that no rations would issue to those who had not performed five days' work a week. Previous to this an irrigating ditch had been dug, by the people under the management of the Kansas Sinaloa Investment Company, with the understanding that Mr. Owens's company was to purchase it and its laterals for the use and benefit of the colony, but Owens's followers took possession of it and would not allow those who had taken up individual lands to use the water. Yes, sir, it is my opinion that Mr. Owens's idea was to construct the railroad at the expense of the people and secure the land grants along the line, and then unload. He once came near selling his interest in the railroad on English syndicate for $200.000 been organized to advance a principle—
to build, farm, town, factory and exchange upon the all-smbracing plan of integral co-operation—to advance the usefulness and importance of man, woman and child.
The Credit Foncier Company is now the most conspicuously successful corporation that has ever attracted men and women to pool their public labors, to put in trust their common properties, to employ themselves through their own directors upon lines of equity and progress. The Credit Foncier Company has been the means of ausing more discussion upon the correct way to live; educate and act; how to irrigate, fence and cultivate a public farm; how to build and pay for a ditch, and how for individual liberty, when the individual becomes a member of a community, can go before it may interfere with the just rights of others, and what is the extent of the consideration a person owes to the society by which he or she is encouraged and protected.

"As the champion of the private rights their common properties, to employ themselves through their own directors upon lines of equity and progress. The Credit Foncier Company has been the means of ausing more discussion upon the correct way to live; educate and act; how property should be separated and controlled, how to live ducate and act; how property should be separated and controlled, how to build and pay for a ditch, and bow far individual liberty, when the individual abcomes a member of a community, can go before it may interfere with the just rights of others, and what is the extent of the consideration a person owes to the society by which he or she is encouraged and protected.

"As the champion of the private rights of the individual, and of the individual ownership, use and enjoyment of private property, the Credit Foncier Company has never had an equal. Fiction has never yet dreamed of happier, holier and broader equities in all the relations of life than the Credit Foncier Company has incorporated fiself to put into realization. There is not a private right, a public conversion to the credit Foncier Company has incorporated fiself to put into realization. There is not a private right, a public conversion to the individual of their services in devising the plan of procedure, and for floating the first mortgage bonds. The stockholders were to have divided among themselves an additional $6500 per mile of thirty-year subsidy bonds granted to Mr. Owens aforesaid by the Mexican government. In addition to this they were to receive several million acres of public lands from the sale of which they expected to realize largely. There were also $20,000 per mile income bonds, pavable in thirty years at 5 per cent.

To get at the facts connected with the deplorable state of affairs at this place, I interviewed leading members of both the Saints and the Kickers. The Saints are the Owens adherents. H. A. Hart is a leading Kicker. Notes of his interview are to follow. He was born in Wisconsin forty years ago, is a man of marked intelligence, who first migrated to Enterorise, Kan., where he became identified with the Labor party was elected to Congress in 1884. He is now treasurer and beaten in 1888. He is now treasurer of the Kansas Sinaloa Investement Company, incorporated under the laws of Kansas for the purchase of lands here, which were eventually to pass to the ownership of the Credit Foncier Company. In response to questions propounded, he said: "The trouble was brought about by Mr. Owens's railroad project and attempted credit payments for work done on it. The credits of that company are the medium of exchange." "All members are bound by contract to credits of that company are the medium of exchange.

"All members are bound by contract to turn in all products and perform all labor for these credits. It's a service for a service. The Credit Foncier company, by Owens's contract, pledged the labor and products of all the people to the railroad company, whether they worked upon the road or the farm, and whether the bonds were considered valuable by them or not. Yes, sir, this contract was entered into without the knowledge or consent of the people. A circular setting forth the nature of this contract was issued and the thinking members of the colony rebelled, declaring that the bonds were not good security for their labor. Mr. Owens's paper, a bimonthly denounced all such as kickers, and refused to give the kickers any hearing in the columns. Mr. Owens was vested with unlimited power by the board of directors. The scrip decreased in value until a quart of milk reached the price of $1.

"The inducements held out to the people."

"The inducements held out to the people were that the railroads, the telegraph and telephone lines, as well as the lands, were to belong to the people, free from taxation, and that they could establish individual enterprises and industries to their own benefit, but when they arrived they were informed that the product of all their labor went to the general fund, for which scrip would issue at a value fixed by Mr. Owens's representative. They were permitted to barter only through the central department. Individuals were forbidden to own or keep for their own use poultry or animals. They were allowed nothing except their household effects. The people were reduced to a diet of corn came near selling his interest in the rail-road to an English syndicate for $200,000.

MEN'S DRESS:

A BUCKSKIN WAISTCOAT THE EWEST "SMART" THING.

thorter Coats, Narrower Trousers and Higher Collars—The Colored Shirt Even with a Prince Albert Coat.

NEW YORK, March 2, 1895.—(Special Correspondence.) The eddet has gone forth, and in a few weeks the heavy "swells" of New York, the men whose chief pride and glory consists in leading the fashion, will be wearing cutaway coats with croscent-shaped pockets at the sides and sharp creases in the sleeves. The practice of creasing the trousers has become so common that the very nice have been forced to seek some other distinguishing mark. Some of them, wishing to be different from the common herd, have appeared on Fifth avenue with trousers creased at the side, but this proves an unhappy device, since it makes the legs look fat and misshapen. So the ultras will go back to the fore and aft creasing of the nether garments and seek movetty in the arms, where the eleeves will be flattened into well-marked creases along seams. This new fad will be especially applied to fancy goods in rough cloths, brown effects with a dash of green promising wide popularity this coming spring.

THE BUCKSKIN WAISTCOAT. THE BUOKSKIN WAISTCOAT.

The crescent pockets are for the akirts of the cutaway coat and show on the outside heavily braided and tipped at an arigle, so that the hands go into them conveniently, their position being similar to that of the trousers' pocket. This new feature will be very popular among "dressy" men, who will also adopt the buckskin waistcoat, which will be worn with the Prince Albert, the cutaway and the sack coat, tan shades being used in the daytime and pink or red for evening. These buckskin vests will be, for the most part, cut like ordinary waistcoats, although some of them are made with the silk sleeves. It is needless to say that only a man who is always faultiess in his attire and has an extensive wardrobe will dare to appear in one of these new will dare to appear in one of these new creetions, sometimes brilliant with em-broidery.

SHORTER COATS.

SHORTER COATS.

As to the cut of men's clothes, commonsense people will rejoice to hear that coats with skirts of ungraceful length have had their day. Prince Alberts will be shortened at least three inches, reaching only about an inch below the knee, while cut-aways will not fall lower than the knee joint on tall men and two inches above it on short men.

It is not generally understood, even by tailors, that the skirts of a coat may be made to seem longer or shorter according to the position of the waist. Short men have been made very ridiculous these last months by trying to follow the craze for long skirts not at all adapted to their diminutive persons. An artist tailor makes a short man seem to wear a coat with long skirts by merely heightening the waist, and does the reverse for tail men by lowering the waist.

The general tendency this spring will be rowards coats with the waist cut lower, the measurements of a cutaway for a man of fashion-plate height, that its, 5 feet 8 inches, being 17½ inches for the waist and 36 inches for the entire length. Covert coats will still be worn, only over sack coats.

NARROWER TROUSERS.

NARROWER TROUSERS.

The new designs for trousers make them smaller, at being generally admitted among men who study dress that the ma-jority of their sex are not seen to the best advantage in trousers of such ample dimensions as have been worn. Only tail, inely-made men with shapely legs can support the test of the meal-bag cut, and such men in this country are felt to be in a minority. So the best tailors are using less material and fitting the trousers more closely to the legs, especially below them smaller, at being generally admitted more closely to the legs, especially below the knee.

Speaking of fancy waistcoats or vests, the latter being now the most approved word, those who do not care to go in for the extreme buckskin quality and yet wish, to be in the fashion, will lay in for spring and early summer a dozen or so fancy vests, which will be worn in a great variety of patterns with a prevalence of high-colored reds. These vests will be worn with all styles of coats and will be changed several times a day.

BROADCLOTH OUT OF FAVOR.

BROADCLOTH OUT OF FAVOR.

The spring sack coat will be cut single-breasted for the most part, with three buttons, although some of the double-breasted style will still be worn. Prince Afberts will be made of rough cheviots and vicunas, but not so with the dress suits, the fashionable material here being a dull finish diagonal of fine wale. The statement in some recent fashion articles that broadchoth is coming into vogue for dress suits as absolutely inaccurate. Mr. Bell, the Flith-avenue authority, who is now London purchasing spring goods, cabled the other day that there is not a yard of broadchoth in the English capital fit for use. This expensive material rots away very quickly unless it is preserved with unusual care, zinc cases being necessary to protect it from detectronating.

"This is a beautiful piece of goods, isn't fit?" said a Fifth-avenue tailor, showing me some broadcloth that seemed of the finest quality. "Well, look at it now," and giving the goods a snap he tore it in two like so much paper. "That cost me $3.50 a yard, and it isn't worth a cent as you see it. It is almost impossible to get good broadchoth at present."

Another point is that the velvet collar for dress suits has sunk back into oblivion, and will no longer be seen on the neck of any man who would be considered well dressed.

After talking with many authorities on The spring sack coat will be cut single dressed.

After talking with many authorities on men's dress, I found a consensus of opinion that Americans, in spite of the money they spend on clothes, do not make as good an appearance as Englishmen, and for the an appearance as Engaismen, and for the sufficient reason that the latter take more pains to study what becomes them and spend more time every day, not only in dressing, but in taking care of their clothes.

A TAILOR'S PRETTY IDEA OF ECON-

"There are some men I couldn't dress for any amount of money," said a prom-inent tailor. "They would spoil all my efforts by appearing in dirty shoes or without gloves or with some impossible necktie, say a bright green. Another trouble is that American men will not change their clothes often enough. It is ally economy to have six or seven its of clothes and wear then in succes-on through the week, but they refuse to son through the week, but they refuse to see it.

"Then they throw their clothes about any way at night instead of hanging the coats on frames and folding the trousers. The best thing to do with trousers, by the way, to keep them in shape, is to lay them on a shelf with the creases in position, and smooth them down. The heat of the hand in doing this is better then any system of weights, and I have never believed in trousers stretchers. I would advise a man to have a separate pair of suspenders for every pair of trousers and to leave them buttoned fast when the trousers are put away. Then, having regulated the length accurately, he is always sure that the legs will hang properly."

Wheever wishes to be well dressed

COMING EPIDEMIC.

A fashionable shirt-maker told me with an air of profound regret, that the new high turn-over collar, the double decked abomination called the "Gresham," has come to stay. The joke of it is that these collars were originally made, three or four years ago, not for the "swells," but for an old man who was considered crotchety on all subjects and wished to wear them with his neglige shirts.

"Somehow they have caught on," said he. "The Troy people are now manufacturing them by tens of thousands, and the whole country will be wearing them this spring." ately, he is always sure that the legs will any properly."

Whoever wishes to be well dressed hould study what is becoming to him ersonally, regardless of the fashion. It is amazing the bad taste shown by men in ordering clothes; tall, lean men are pt to have a weakness for stripes, and at, short men for cheeks, whereas they hould exactly reverse the thing. Then allow-faced men usually insist on wearing browns, the most unbecoming color the whole country, this soring."

"Will the best-dressed men wear them?"

"Certainly not. They will wear a perfectly straight collar, two and one-fourth inches high in front and two inches high at the back. These will be worn with butterfly cles, which are made in two

"In scarfs a large puff in the ascot style will be worn in the spring with Prince Alberts, and in this tie a scarf-pin may be used properly, but never in any other. Gentlemen who knew how to dress never put a scarf-pin in a tie unless it is really of some use in holding the kuot together. To put a scarf-pin in a four-in hand, or, worse still, in a butterfly tie, is absolutely bad form. It is a case of merely vulgar display. Four-in-hand scarfs will be worn with small knots and large ends, and in the best grades will not be made of satins. as these are apt to crush up. COLORED SHIRTS EVEN WITH A PRINCE ALBERT.

The most fashionable patterns will run lengthwise, the cross stripes having gone entirely out or been consigned to the cheaper grades of shirts. Shirts with collars attached are losing favor, partly on account of the difficulty of getting them properly laundered at summer resorts and partly on account of them, this requiring a special shirt trunk."

SHOES AND HATS.

SHOES AND HATS.

Men who would be well dressed must say farewell to their razor-toed shoes, which will be replaced this spring by the rounded toe, not very wide, a happy medium, let us hope. Tan shoes will be worn in greater numbers than ever, and buttoned shoes for men are a thing of the past. In patent-leathers fancy tops will be accounted not in the best taste.

In the matter of hats, the announcement is for spring Derbys of black or brown, with low crowns, wide brims and a flattish set. The fashionable slik hat will no longer show the bell shape, but will be made with tapering crown, a style that has not been seen for years in this country. Soft hats with low crowns, wide brims and little variations in color from the pearls and browns at present in style, will be much worn.

CLEVELAND MOFFETT.

The ill-fated French steamer that recently passed through such a perilous voyage conveyed the spring importations of dress goods consigned to the "Ville de Paris." The accidental delay only enhanced the beauty of the new dress fabrics shown exclusively by the Ville de Paris, No. 223 South Broadway.

Fashionable handles will be of natural horn, a hippopotamus tooth, the young 'point' of a deer, or the silver deposit handle so popular last season, and the cost will be $15 or more.

The ashplant, already referred to, is a nice looking cane, of cylindrical shape, had been suffered to the plumage of a dove, very tough and strong, and at the same time light. It is more suitable for a hunting crop than for a cane, and to this use it will probably grade. It has a natural handle, but in the fashionable varieties has a heavy band of silver around the extreme end of the handle and another little way down the stick. The late Roscoe Conkling nearly always carried a cane of this description, and was much given to whittling upon the handle when sitting at home. He owned probably fifty or more of them, some beautfully decorated, and he kept them on arack in his gymnasium room at No. 9 West Twenty-fourth street. He contended that a man should carry nothing in the way of a cane but one with a natural handle, and he had a number of instances to cite of men who, carrying round knobs and carved handles, had, by reason of the pressure upon the large veins of the hand, become injured in the shoulder and back. One such sufferer, he claimed, was the late James G. Blaine. Doctors of standing say there is truth in Mr. Conkling's seventention, especially where the handle is of a base metal, such as brass or even tarof a base metal, such as brass or even tar-mished silver, since the deposit on the metal rubbing off upon the hand may be absorbed into the system harmfully. THE GOLF CANE.

Another novelty this season will be the rolf cane, introduced by Amassa Lyon. has a handle like a golf "driver," cut of a solid and very fine piece of Ceyout of a solid and very fine piece of Ceylon horn. One side is inlaid with a piece of solid silver in lieu of the piece of horn on the "driver," and on the other side is a piece of finely-chased silver, to simulate the piece of lead on the "driver" which is let in to give the desired weight. The joint of the handle to the cane is covered with about two inches of fine silver, wire-thread woven round and round. It is massive, original, easy in the hand. It will soon—no doubt, be widely imitated, to the disgust of all possessors of the real thing. It is a typical clubman's cane, and should cost about $12.

Other types will be variations on well-known canes of last season, but more expensively dressed, some being studded with surquoise (seed) for a distance of two attracted the notice of a cane manufacturer who gave the Frenchman an order for a number of sticks similarly marked. He reported that they could not be supplied in less than two years, and keeping his secret to himself he "wounded" quite a number of growing saplings. Then it was a secret no longer, and the foresters in all barts commenced to do the same thing. Thus the Congo has come into plentiful supply.

a long crook, though Mr. Hill does not hook his cane over his arm in the regulation "dude" style, but carries it free, applying it to the use intended. The "Congo" is also popular with members of the Manhattan and Calumet clubs. The staid Union League men affect a black bamboo with a buck-horn handle, heavily banded and mounted in silver; a good cane to talk with, showy, yet strong, and a forminable weapon at close quarters. This was the kind of cane "Biff" Ellison carried in the encounter with Broker Henriques which landed him in the penitentiary. Perhaps the Lotos Club men have the greatest assortment of canes in the world as individual properties. They are many of them globe trotters, and own many curious types. One is a curious rattan, carried by Mr. Davis. It was given to him by a brother member who, in Bornec many years ago, saw one of the Sea Dyaks coming through the jungle with a human head freshly severed slung on a cane which was curiously decorated by carving filled in with native pigments. He gave the native a piece of American plug tobacco for the cane, and bringing it to this country had Kaldenberg, the ivory-carver, clean out all the pigment, dress it for a cane, and put on it a handle of finely-carved ivory.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S CANES.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S CANES.

Queen Victoria's walking stick, which she uses habitually, is, to look at, a very commorplace stick, being only a sapling of English oak, but it has a very interesting listory. It was cut from the famous oak tree of Boscobel, which sheltered her predecessor Charles from his enemies by its thick leaves, after the battle of Worcester. The handle is a curiously-carved ivory idod which was obtained at the seige of Seringaparam.

THE COLLECTOR OF CANES

THE COLLECTOR OF CANES. The collector has not neglected canes.

G. S. Nickerson of Chicago has a collection of about four hundred. Some of them were lowned by men prominent in the civil war era. Most of them were given to him, but others were bought as opportunity offered. One is a blackthorn from Ireland, which once belonged to Abraham Lincoln, although it is doubtful if the marcollection is arranged on next house, to a cane, and covers three of four walls of Mr. Nickerson's "den" on Jackson avenue.

The late Capt. Bragge of Brighton had probably a type of every cane used on earth, from the eight-foot long staff of the lewish rabbi of old days to the curiously-bent shoulder staff of the English peddler or "bagman" of the early part of this century.

These collections have demonstrated thet walking sticks have freaks. If not used regularly they will "mourn;" that is to say, they will weep, exude moisture, warp and twist thomselves, and shell off their bark. When perfectly new they will not do this, only after use! Some of them are said to become so sensitive that a step on the floor of an adjoining room will set them quivering and shaking like an aspen. There may be some explanation for these phenomento, as there was for the conduct of the cane of C. J. Clark, the well-known ceramic authority of New York. He had a came which he placed among others and did not use. One day he took it down to show it to a friend, and dropped it on the floor. It lay there a minute or so and then suddenly commenced to roll half over and back, the handle evidently preventing it from going further. It was examined without result, and was taken to a leading cane manufacturer, who bored a hole in the handle and shook out something very like the "jumping beans," only much larger. It was found to be hollowed from end to end, and was as light as a feather. Worms must have been at work in its for years, How they had survived the steaming, straning and general shake-up of the manufacturing process is a wonder.

We have made canes in this country since 1802, but we import the great bulk of our raw material, much of. it from South America. The scope of the trade may be judged by the value of the raw material imported in one year. For ratinas and rough sticks Uncle Sam psild out bo other countries in 1833 no less than $432,000. That represents a number of canes for the use of her citizens, and does not include those a

CURIOUS CANES.

Among the curious items of novelties are canes equipped with a lamp. One type has a spring which, when pressed, allows a silver arabesque on the handle to fly up, and as it opens, it liberates a scratcher, which in turn, flashes across the vapor of a kerosene lamp deftly hid below. Another type is a receptacle for tinder, which is ignited by the concussion of compressed air produced by the sudden driving down of a piston into the cylinder containing the tinder—a device of the last century revived. And still another is one in which the handle can be removed and wherein is placed an electric lamp which glows when a button in the side of the stick is pressed. Still another is the pipestick, which by unscrewing the ferrule, shows a mouthplece of a pipe, and by unscrewing the tip of the handle reveals the bowl of a pipe. If a shorter pipe is desired, the stick unscrews at the band, and there is found the mouthplece for the shorter one. Among the curious items of novelties are street, the street inserves at the band, and there is found the mouthpiece for the shorter one.

The fashion of using canes with carved handles, and heavily-chased metal handles, has evolved a new industry. A woman who keeps a store near Sixth avenue makes quite a little money knitting covers of silk, etc., with the object of saving the gloves from being torn, or the uneven surface from irritating the palm. Many canes with these covers on may be seen on the surface cars by observant people. A word as to the man who carries his cane under his arms at right angles, threatening the eyes of all behind him. What shall be done with him? In Germany a citizen is not only allowed, but is requested to knock the cane to a level of safety, and if the cane-bearer resents it, to give him into the custody of the authorities. This is the age of reform in this country, and here is a much needed one.

A REASON FOR IT.

Dear Sir—I began taking your "Favorite Prescription" the first month of pregnancy, and have continued taking it since confinement. I did not experience the nausea or any of the ailments due to pregnancy, after I began taking your "Prescription." I was only in labor a short time, and the physician said I got along unusually well.

We think it saved me a great deal with leucorrhea also, and it has done a world of good for me.

The interior of the building was presultively decorated, the dining-room being capecially oherming with a profusion of four-de-lis and ferns. With appetite abarpened by the drive to the mountain sir, the guests did ample justice to the visuals placed before them. The repast was supplemented by toasts as follows:

The Pickwick Club whist tournament The Christian Citizenship League Athletic Grounds Assured for Santa Ana—Some Social Doings.

SANTA ANA, March 3. — (Special Correspondence.) As the time approaches for the city election there is manifested an increased interest in the matter of selecting municipal officers. There is, of course, more interest taken in the office of city marshal than in any other, for in this office there is a aziary attached, while in many of the others that are to be filled the only compensation for the services expected from the officers is the honor that goes along with the public trust. The progressive citizens, however, are beginning to wake up on the selection of city trustees. They realize that there are many important questions to be dealt with by the incoming board, and that it will require an unusual amount of vigilance to prevent interested parties working in a majority to advance personal or corporative ends. With electric lights, sewers, street paving and other improvements of a like character on the table, the city needs a live, progressive, economical and practical set of men for intrustees. With this kind of a board the city will forge ahead as it has never done before.

The Pickwick Club whist tournament which has been in progress for four consecutive Friday nights was concluded Friday evening, and Capt, Orban's side were declared winners by a score of 115 points. Thirty-six players took part in the tournament, and the defeated side was taxed at the rate of $1 each, and the sum went into the fund for the furnishing of the clubroom. After the termination of the tournament's a meeting of the directors was held and four new members admitted.

The statement made by one of the local papers that the Legislature had passed the bill amending the statute raising the levy of cities of the sixth class to $1 on a hundred, and which would affect taxation in Pasadena, is erroneous. No such bill has passed, and it is not at all likely that any action will be taken upon the matter at the present session. Pasadena's levy is, therefore, not likely to be increased in some other way.

Realty, especially in vacant and acreage property, has been the livellest during the week just passed of any period this season. Besides the large sales of vacant property on Orange Grove avenue already noticed, several residences have changed hands, and there is much inquiry concerning property by visiting tourists. The preliminaries for the extension of Oakland avenue, have been adjusted, and proceedings for the necessary condemnations will be begun on Monday, and assessments levied. Mr. Gibbs's rights in the matter have been adjudged and a compensation of $6000 allowed, all but $1750 of which is charged to the benefit of the land through which the proposed extension will be made. James H. Adams will receive $225 for his interest.

SOME PROSPECTIVE CANDIDATES.

The political pot in Santa Ana has begun to simmer as time for the city election draws near. The time for holding a convention has passed and consequently those who are desirous of coming before the people are having petitions circulated among the residents for the necessary 3 per cent. of the votes which will entitle them to be piaced on the ticket, providing the said petitions are filed with the City Clerk fifteen days before the date of the election.

For City Trustees petitions are out in the Second Ward for R. S. Whitney, and it is talked that both S. W. Smith and Ed Parker will be urged to make the race, while in the Fourth Ward a canvass is being made for E. D. Wallie and J. S. Haywood, and it is whispered about that Geo. W. Minter and Dr. Garner may yet enter the area.

In the Fifth Ward C. E. Gronard and George A. Riley are represented with petitions and it is intimated that J. C. Quick may conclude to enter the race. The friends of J. W. McCiellan and Gus Reinhaus hope that these gentlemen will yet consent to allow their names to be used.

In the Third Ward the names of J. P. Twomey and E. B. Smith are being mentioned, but as yet these gentlemen.

The First Ward voters propose the names of W. B. Hervey (incumbent,) Henry Carpenter and J. E. Bunker, but as yet no petitions, so far as known, have been circulated for these gentlemen.

For City Marshal A. C. Curtice (incumbent, A. Nigg and George E. Morgan have announced themselves and other announcementimes as a candidate for City Treasurer.

FEEDING A QUEEN.

LFrom a Special Contributor. 1

Apiculture has proved one of the fascin-ating pursuits in the animal world. The habits of bees have furnished columns of habits of bees have furnished columns of interesting matter and yet much fine knowledge of the ugly little honey-makers, their quaint customs and mode of living, belongs to a primative race of country folk, who dwell remote from cities and have neither sufficient intellect nor energy to tell half the interesting anecdotes of the cell-makers that have become theirs by inheritance and observation.
"Do you know how they train a queen?"

by inheritance and observation.

"Do you know how they train a queen?" asked a bonneted old country woman of me one day, as she changed the position of her snull ritlek from one side of the mouth to the other. "You know that they have a woman ruler and won't allow no other?" she continued. I nodded my affirmative, making a mental note of the fact to give to the women suffragists. "Well," she continued, "the throne doesn't come down from mother to daughter as in kingdoms, but the working bees elect their own queen."

"They are very democratic then, like we are," I put in, "and have their say as to who shall govern them."

"That's so, she responded, "but they don't go about it in the same way. You see when this hive gets too full, the working bees know that it's time to look about for another queen. They must have a new hive and so I put one up for them. They understand and go about training a queen that shall be royal enough to rule them."

"So they make a robe of honey ermine and put it on the shoulders of the pret-tlest girl bee who receives the popular vote?" I suggested.

tlest girl bee who receives the popular vote?" I suggested.
"They don't do any such thing," with a gesture of disgust. "They pick out a larva and begin to feed it with the queerest food you ever saw. They get it from certain flowers and never use it in the making of honeycomb. Only once do they seek such sweetness and then 'tis on an occasion like this. They put the little living germ off to itself and nourish it on this food. We bec-tenders call it 'the royal jelly.' Whenever we see this performance going on we know that very soon the old queen will be the dowager and that the new hive is to be occupied. As soon as the larva reaches its proper strength it is carried by the bees to their new home as ruler and the throne and scepter are given her. This royal jelly' never makes its appearance again until a like occasion calls for it. We call this feeding a queen." this feeding a queen."

SINGLE TAX CLUB.

Discussion on Educational Topics at Last Evening's Meeting

An audience that filled Blanchard-Fetzgerald Hall and seemed deeply interested attended the Single Tax Club's regular weekly meeting last evening and listened to Mrs. Alice Moore McComas's talk on "Industrial Education." The speaker held that manual training should be added to the educational work of public schools; that the educations work of public scrious; that it is of more consequence to the children than mere intellectual instruction, and that participation in the industrial branches should be compulsory in all those attending public institutions of instruction. She has attending public institutions of instruction.

also strongly advocated more and better school facilities in Los Angeles. A paper on the necessity for the solu-tion of the existing social and industrial problem along single tax lines was read by S. E. Drake, followed by a brief critic-ism of Mrs. McComas's address by Law-rence Dunham of New York. The latter gentleman admitted that industrial educa-tion as an independent proposition was genteman admixed that industrial educa-tion as an independent proposition was meritorious, but contended that whatever improvements might be made in educa-tional facilities would ultimately redound only to the people who owned the land. only to the people who owned the land. The places with the best institutions of fearning would attract the most people, and while the people at large would be taxed the fand owners would absorb the benefits, because with increase of desirable population land would appreciate; hence as land values advanced with public improvements, land values alone should be taxed.

Superintendent Search Returns. School Superintendent Search returned vesterday from a trip to Cleveland, O., where he attended the meeting of the National Department of Superintendence. He was one of the speakers at the meeting and presented the question of individual teaching such as has been recently intro-duced in the public schools of this city.

RUSSIA AND CHINA.

A LOOK AT THE MONGOLS AND THE MANCHOOS, AND THEIR CURIOUS CUSTOMS.

Will the Japanese Demand Manchuria?-China's Wonderful Tributary Provinces-Gold and Opium-Adventures with the Mongols-Tartar Caravans-Something About the Dirtiest Race in the World.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The settlement of the war between China and Japan is likely to result in a decided change in the geography of Asia. So far neither England nor Russia has made any open claims as to what they want of China, but the ports of Asia are full of all sorts of rumors. It is well known that the Russians are making their surveys of the harbors on the east coast of Korea with an idea of making one of them the terminus of the Transsiberian road, and the latest inside news is that the English have offered the Chinese a large sum of money in exchange for the Island of Formesa. China can hardly hope to raise money from her own people without a revolution and the consequent establishment of a new government. The empire, in fact, is tottering, and the people neither care for the war nor for the government. In the words of a leading business man of Shanghai, in a letter which I have received during the past week, they consider the trouble with the Japanese the Emperor's "pigeon" or business. He has gotten into it, they say, now let him get out of it. There is no land in the world where taxes are so low, nor, strange as it may seem to say so, where the people have so much power, and where the government is to such a large extent republican. The Chinese will not be able to large him in the eye and said: "How do you do?" to her as we passed, and her olid Tartar husband whipped up his camel and put his hand on his knife as I came up. I looked him in the eye and said: "How do you do?" He answered by mocking me and giving me to understand that I had better keep away. Had I not had a good party of men around me I doubt not that he would have assaulted me. MONGOLIA AND MANCHURIA.

Few people have any idea of the immense extent of territory which China has outside of the empire proper. It is larger than the whole United, States, and it is more than all Europe. Manchuria, which lies to the northeast of China, and on the edge of which the Japanese troops have been fighting, is equal to ten States, the size of Ohio, or eight the size of New York. Mongolia, further to the westward is about half as big as the whole United States, and the immense province of Ill is about as large as one-third of our whole territory. Thibet practically belongs to China, and it is about twelve times as big as New York State. The Japanese got into Manchuria when they fought at the mouth of the Yaloo River, and they have been marching through the country and pushing their way up to the capital—the city of Moukden. It is by no means an impossibility that the Japanese may ask for a slice of Manchuria, and if so some wonders in the way of mineral wealth may be expected through its development. The gold mines of Russia undoubtedly run down to the mountains of Manchuria and Mongolia. There was quite a gold excitement in the Manchurian Mountains about four years ago, and both gold and sliver have been found. The country is fertile, and it surprised me to find that optum could be profitably raised so far north. It was introduced about thirty years ago, and the country now produces more than a million pounds of optum a going through the Nankew Pass, about a going through the Nankew Pass, Few people have any idea of the immense extent of territory which China has year. It also produces good tobacco, and it has vast areas of fine fiorests. Japan has practically no timber left, and the country would be of great value to her. It would act as a bulwark between Ching and Korea, and the Mikado would no longer need to fear that Emperor might form an alliance with the King of Korea.

AMONG THE MONGOLS.

The inhabitants of both Manchuria and Mongolia care but little for China. They are of a different race, and they would accept the government of the Japanese quite as readily as that of Peking. I met many of these men during my stay in Asia. I first came in contact with them in the Chinese capital. I traveled with them on my way to the great wall, and I saw hundreds of them in my journeys through Siberia. The Mongols have a market in Peking. It is just back of the English

The Mongols are perhaps as dirty as any other people in the world. Those The Mongols are perhaps as dirty as any other people in the world. Those whom I saw were greasy and filthy, both as to their clothes and their persons. I am told they never wash their bodies, and seldom their faces and hands. The poorer classes dress in rags, but the richer wear costly garments lined with the finest lambskin. I have a picture of a Mongolian princess who was at Peking a year or so ago. Her head was framed in silver beads, and she had long tassels of silver hanging down from her black fur cap. Her hair, was done up in two long braids, which were pulled over the breast. These braids are often smeared with glue, which makes the hair shine and keeps it in place. The girl was very beautiful, and some of the younger girls are by no means bad looking. They fade soon, however, and the older women whom I saw made me think of our Indian squaws. They have no night clothes, and they sleep in the same garments which they use during the day. They have no such things as stoves. A fire is built inside their tent, and the smoke goes out at the roof. The tents are made of skin and sometimes of cloth. They are circular in shape, and the people huddle up in them and sit and sleep where they can.

To the other end of the stick a rope is teed, and this rope is tied to the saddle or pack of the camel in front, and thus a whole caravan is fastened together, as it were, with clothes pins and clothes lines. It is impossible to extimate the number of these camels that are in use. They are continually marching through Peking. At certain times of the year they will fill the roads leading into Mongolia like fences, and you see them everywhere on their low, measured tret, moving across the country.

BUDDHIST BOOK STORES.

There are a number of Buddhist book tores in Peking, and the Chinese capital has one street which is devoted to nothing else but book stores. There are publishing houses there which are devoted to the publishing of Buddhist books. The books are cut out on blocks, and are not set up from type. Some of the editions are costly, and some of the richer priests prefer to have their books written out by hend.

ONE WIFE, FOUR HUSBANDS.

The Mongols have but one wife, though the richer of them often have concubines. The Mongols have but one wife, though the richer of them often have concubines. It is far different in Thibet, as I learned from the famous traveler, Mrs. Isabella Bird Bishop. Mrs. Bishop went out to Asia in the same ship with me last year. She expected to travel in Korea, and she had just returned from a trip among the Thibetans. I talked with her for some time about the custom of polyandry. It seems that there is a scarcity of women, and the average female has from four to six husbands. If a man marries his wife becomes the common property of his brothers, and, though he is the chief husband, she is the wife of the whole lot. The woman rules the family. She takes charge of the money, and she is practically the governor of the establishment. It is only a very rich man who is able to have a wife to himself, and fathers sell their daughters to the highest bidders. The children are regarded as belonging to the women, and the fathers can lay no claim to them. Mrs. Bishop said that the women seem to be satisfied with the situation, and that they rather pity their sis-is as good as any you will find in the world, and these fat tails are especially delicious. The Mongols use the fat in making brick-tes soup. They mash up little bricks of tea, and when the water is belling they put in some of this mutton fat and milk and eat the whole as a soup. The bricks in which the tea is made are about 10 inches square, 7 inches wide and 3 inches thick. They look like chocolate and are sometimes made in wide and 3 inches thick. They look like chocolate and are sometimes made in smaller sizes. In addition to this, they eat buttermilk, curds and whey. They are very fond of intoxicating liquors, and they have a beer made of mare's milk upon which they keep themselves about half drunk. Their mutton is frozen at the beginning of winter, and the weather is so cold that it will keep until spring. It is said in Thibet that mutton can be kept for years. The air is very dry and very cold, and after a few days the flesh becomes so dry that it can be powdered with the hand and stored away like flour. The Thibetans use this mutton without cooking, at at it is add not to need sait.

A NATION OF BUDDHISTS.

The Mongols are more religious than the Chinese. They may be called almost a nation of Buddhists, though there are a few Mohammedans among them. They have a number of temples inside of Peking and there are about 1500 of these people who live in the Chinese capital. The biggest recently in Peking is owned by the Mon. there are about 1500 of these people who live in the Chinese capital. The biggest monastery in Peking is owned by the Mongols and the Thibetans. It has hundreds of priests, and chey are the most intolerant and superstitious of their kind. Foreigners are by no means eafe in going through it. They are liable to be mobbed, and it is only by bribing and fighting that one can get his way out. There are three living Buddhas in the world. One of these is in Lhassa, another is somewhere in Monzolia and the other is in Peking. I became indirectly acquainted with the brother of the living Buddha in Peking, and I was told that this Buddha was fond of cigars and liquots, and that he now and their went about incog., like Haroun Alraschid. There are numerous temples scattered over Mongolia and Thibet is said to be a country of temples. I was within ninety miles of Thibet during my stay in Darifiling, in the Himsleya Mountains, and the Thibetans whom I saw both here and in Peking were about the same as the Mongols. I am told that the people of both countries do little but swing prayer-wheels, drink whisky and keep themselves dirty. I heard great stories ters in other parts of the world, who can have only one husband. HOW MONGOLIA IS GOVERNED.

The Mongolians are divided up into tribes, and they are governed from Peking. The Emperor appoints governor-generals, and all the tributary provinces of China have military governors, and there are Chinese soldlers to enforce their edicts. As a rule, however, the people are oppressed in every possible way. The government is corrupt and the man who can pay the most can do as he pleases.
Manchuria is ruled by military boards.
Some parts of Mongolia have their own officials, under the government at Peking.
The province of Ili is ruled by a military governor, and in outer Mongolia there is tribes, and they are governed from Pek-

His capital is known as Urga, and it is the biggest city in Mongola. It contains about 30,500 people, and the most of these are priests. The big llama or living Buddha is said to have the country through him. It is much the same in Thibet, and the governorment is a combination of religious corruption and Chinese despotism. Inner Mongolia has a different government, and. In fact, the woll of the present routle will probably lead to their reploration. FRANK G. CAIFENTER. (Copyright, 1885, by Frank G. Carpenter.)

EDMUND KIRKE'S RECOLLECTIONS OF JAMES HARPER, THE VETERAN PUBLISHER.

A Magazine Article that Made a Great Stir-A Temperance Conference Rudely Broken in on-Whittier and Fields Test a Haunted House-A Bit of Literature that Paid the Publisher Well.

(By a Special Correspondent, James R. Gilmore ("Edmund Kirke.")

At the time I knew him, James Harper, founder and head of the publishing house of Harper & Bros., had withdrawn from the active supervision of the extensive business. Still he was at his office ply may not be absolutely correct, for the active supervision of the exten-business. Still he was at his office day, and nothing about the great the interview took place more than twentysive business. Still he was at his office every day, and nothing about the great establishment escaped his attention. I never visited the office after 1862, when I began to write occasionally for the Harper publications, without having a pleaant chat with the senior partner, he often doing the most of the talking, for he had all of Mr. Lincoln's talent at the telling of a story. It made no sort of difference to him if he was himself the butt of the anecdote. I recall now one of this character, which was with him an actual experience. It was as follows:

HOW MAYOR HARPER CHOSE POLICEMEN.

When he was Mayor of New York the police force was under his direct control, and it was his custom to consider personally all applications for service in that department. In addition to other essential qualifications, he required that the applicant should be able to read and write, and to test his ability to do this, he kept a book in which he required a candidate or write his arreliance.

rick Murphy-who could neither read nor write, aspired to a position on the 'perlisse," and hearing of this requirement he set himself hard at work to learn constant labor he was soon able to scrawl it in the style known as "coarse hand," and then he presented himself before Mr. Harper. Some of Pat's friends were present on the occasion who considered his pretensions ridiculous: but he quietly made his application, and the book being placed before him, he proceeded very de-liberately and much to the astonishment of his friends, to write his cognomen. Pat's foiled "friends" looked at one happy thought struck one of them, and he said to Mr. Harper: "Please, yer Honor, ask him to write somebody else's years before, I had come into this breathing world. In the meantime the magazine article had been published, but I had not seen or thought of it, having been absent in the distant backwoods.

As I turned in from the broad iron stairway I caught sight of James Harper, seated at his deek, and I quickened my pace in anticipation of his usual cordial greeting. But instead of that I was met with a cold, severe, somewhat grieved stare, as if I had incurred his strong displeasure. I felt bis manner, and merely said, "Good morning, Mr. Harper."

"Good morning, sir" he said, not rising from his chair. "We've been looking for you; it's only yesterday that Fletcher was inquiring if you'd been here lately—it may be that he wants you to write another magazine article." This was said with a slight sneer which plainly disclosed the cause of his displeasure, and, somewhat nettled, I remarked: "Oh, that accounts for the milk in the cocoanut! Now, Mr. Harper, please to takk plain English, and I'll try to thaw you out."

"That is well thought of," responded the Mayor. "Patrick, write my name."

Misther Murphy was now in a box, but his quick wit was equal to the emergency.

"Me write yer Honor's name!" he exclaimed in a sort of hely horror: "me commit forgery, and I a-goin' on the perlisse! I can't do it, yer Honor!"

He couldn't and he wouldn't, but his ready wit saved him. Of course Mr. Harper saw through the ruse, but the jok charmed him, and he eventually made Misther Murphy a star of the first magnitude.

A CONFERENCE RUDELY DISTURBED. Another amusing anecdote that Mr. Harper was fond of relating about himself

Another amusing anecdote that Mr. Harper was fond of relating about himself was a practical joke once played upon him by George Wilkins Kendall of the New Orleans Picayune. The Harpers were about to publish Kendall's "Narrative of the Texan Santa Fe Expedition," and while the work was going through the press the author was frequently at their office to read proofs. He was a genial, companionable gentleman, and in his capacity of "entertainer of the bores," Mr. Harper paid him a good deal of attention.

Calling at the office one morning about 11 o'clock, Kendall failed to see Mr. Harper at his desk, and inquiring his whereabouts, he was told that he was in the private office of the firm, with a score of ladies—members of a ladies' temperance society of which he was president. Saying that he must say a word to Mr. Harper, Kendall strode unceremoniously to the private room, and gently opened the door to where Mr. Harper was seated surrounded by a company of fashionably-dressed women. "Good morning, Mr. Mayor," he said to him. "Is it not about time, sir, that we went out for our morning toddy?" The point of this is that 'Kendall's face bore constant evidence of his frequent indulgence in the exhilarating beverage, while Mr. Harper held all ardent spirits in as utter abhorrence as Horace Greeley. WHITTIER AND FIELDS TEST A WHITTIER AND FIELDS TEST A

HAUNTED HOUSE. One day in July, 1867, I entered Mr. Harper's office and he said to me after a cordial greeting, "Come, sit right down— let's have it—I haven't heard a good thing for a month."

"Neither have I, Mr. Harper. For all of a fortnight I've been investigating a haunted house. With James T. Fields and Mr. Whittler I tried to watch out the and sir. White the days ago, and we had to leave soon after midnight—the din was so unearthly."

he must be a humbug, for the reason that nothing can be photographed which will not reflect the rays of the sun. Spirit cannot do that, it being intangible; mummler must be a humbug."

"And you would like to expose him, and so save some deluded people the dollars they can't afford to throw away?"

"I've more important things to think about, still I wouldn't mind a week's rest from my present work."

So I undertook an investigation, and at the close of the week returned to Mr. Harper, saying: "There surely is a nigger in that fence, but doing my best I can't discover him."

"Well," he said, "tell me—how did you so about the investigation?"

"I first went to Gurney, the photographer, told him what I wanted and induced him to instruct me in the process and point out where the trick could come in. Then I went to Mummler and had him take my photograph. My face was on it, also another resembling Shakespeare, but of no one I'd ever known. It came the same when I assumed another position. Then I told Mummler of my doubts, and he invited me to watch every step of the process. I did so, closely inspected the camera, and rubbed hard the plate so as to remove any latent impression, while all of half a dozen photographs were being taken. Still, on them all there came the same Shakesperian physiogomy. The same thing occurred on the following day, and I gave the thing up, puzzled, but not convinced."

"You know," he said, "the King of Siam could not be made to believe there is such a thing as ice—has it never occurred to you that spirits may be able to clothe themselves with a material and Siam could not be made to believe there is such a thing as ice—has it never occurred to you that spirits may be able to clothe themselves with a material substance drawn from us, or the objects around us?"

"And so reflect the sun's rays? But if they do, why do not our eyes reflect them as well as the camera?"

"Well," he said, "it is mysterious—all life is a mystery. However, I am satisfied that the spirits of the dead can come to the living—Moses and Elias came to Christ on the mount, and He himself came to and talked with Paul and John and the other apostles."

A SIGNIFICANT GOOD-BY

Then for nearly an hour we talked to-gether of life and death and the world to come, "and found no end, in wandering mazes lost." When I came away he fol-lowed me to the head of the stairway, nowed me to the head of the stairway, and there, holding my hand in his, he said:
"I am glad we have had this talk together.
We shall like each other the better for it, and about that other world we shall know all soon—it may be sooned."

We shall like each other the better for it.
And about that other world we shall know
all soon—it may be sooner than we think.
Good-by. God bless you."

Those were the last words I ever heard

The Perfumery Industry. (Florida Agriculturist:) One of our exchanges discusses the perfumery indus try and flower-farming in the following:

The perfumery trade is a large and growing one. There will always be a demand for scents, perfumed soaps and cosmetics, and the means of supplying the demand must expand in proportion. Within recent years this necessity has led to the production of an imitation article the result of chemical manipulation. are largely manufactured in Germany and are being bought in the absence of the pure material. Many trade lists of "floral products" are simply catalogues of such so pleasant or so harmless as the genuine article, and one who habitually uses the latter can tell at once the difference. A comparison can be drawn between any natural scent and its artificial prototype always to the disadvantage of the chemical product with its reminiscences of the mineral basis. The public in this instance prefer the real to the artificial. If the pure articles were placed on the market in sufficient quantities to fix their taste the crystal scents would soon find opening for the production of the legitimate article which might be taken advantage of by many of the colonies to supply the United Kingdom. We think the sug-gestion is worthy the consideration of our small capitalists or cultivators whose means are not fully employed or invested and who are desirous of adding to their means are not fully employed or invested and who are desirous of adding to their ordinary sources of income.

Jamaica could produce perfumes both of ordinary and special character in abundance. The conditions of cultivation are exceptionally favorable and the establishment of a flower farm would, we believe be a profitable undertaking. Col. Taibot demonstrated the fact that flower-farming in Jamaica was feasible, but we are unaware of the results of his efforts in the direction of starting an industry. The enterprise might very well form an adjunct to some of the larger poorhouses. In the neighborhood of Grasse in France there are hundreds of acres where the old, the ailing and the children earn a livelihood by picking roses for the scent market. The only obstacle in the way of embarking in the industry is the preliminary expense. To make perfume from flowers requires a somewhat costly plant. embarking in the industry is the preliminary expense. To make perfume from flowers requires a somewhat costly plant. But admitting that difficulty any one with a fair capital could easily start a farm and confidently calculate on a handsome return for his capital and labor. In India a flower garden started in 1830 in the industry and is now doing a prosperous business and employing over ninety hands. If this result can be achieved in the East it ought to be duplicated in the West Indies.

If this result can be achieved in the Eastit ought to be duplicated in the West Indies.

Flower-farming in Europe for perfumery purposes is engaged in almost exclusively at Var, France. It is here that the jasmine, tuberose, cassia, rose and violet grow to great perfection and where the subsequent processes of manufacture are commercially worked. Of orange biossoms alone as many as 1900 tons are used annually, and nearly 1000 tons of roses. In the Grasse district the buyer is always ready to purchase as small a quantity as a kilo of roses from the small proprietaire. This fact furnishes a hint upon which we might improve. A central factory system might be organized. The plant-holder would buy the modest crops from the settlers and others, in addition to being a farmer himself, and utilize them for the various purposes of the scent market. An entire family could engage in flower-growing, or a farm might be the special care of one member while the remainder are otherwise occupied. There are many odoriferous and other vegetable substances which the floral chemist might find a profitable use for, and the culture of which might add to the resources of the people. Such minor products should not be overlooked in the cultivation of more familiar articles. It should be kept in mind that the agricultural possibilities of the country are not exhausted. It has always been an article of our faith that there is potential wealth lying in the soil
as yet undreamed of. We do not think it is an exaggerated belief. The deancestarequired to realize that wealth are an insight into the capabilities of the soil; enterprise, patience and a moderate capital.
With these a man ought to be able both to enrich himself and to contribute to the prosperous development of the country.

"Well, sir, how do you like those Boston notices?"

I answered: "One of them—The Traveler's—exceedingly wid!. It couched me keenly, for while every other paper, even the old Transcript, for which I wrote gratuitously its leaders on the eve of Lincoln's second election, handled the article without gloves, the Traveler defended me warmly. It brought to my mind the fact that it published the first thing I ever wrote, when I was a boy of only 15."

"Verses, I suppose?" he remarked, with the same slight sneer. "Most great authors begin with verses."

"Nettled again," I said. "Yes, sir, verses; and they had a good title—There's No Such Word as Fail." But, Mr. Harper, you paid me too much for that article, and if you'll hand me a blank check I'll return you the money."

Taken completely aback by his sudden change of tone and manner, I said nothing for a few seconds, then asked, "But those Boston notices; what shall I do about them?"

"If you are sure of your facts, let Rome how!; it won't do any damage."

"The phenomena I saw in the presence of two or three unexceptionable witnesses: the history of the house I had of Harriet Hunt, who had known it from her childhood, and is a very truthful woman. But will not the Boston howl affect the magazine?"

"It has," he said, "already increased the circulation largely—our Boston orders have been duplicated two and three times over. So, my dear fellow, set about that other article at once and I will pay you the five hundred."

"Then you are satisfied to let our account stand as it is?"

"I don't know about Fletcher, and he, you understand, manages the magazine; but I think I should sleep a little better if' you were paid another two hundred and fifty. You've read the text, Thou shall not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corncobs."

Lent is essentially the season for cliques and clubs. During the gay months one is often and to dance vis-a-vis to Mrs. Lord-knows-who, as the Virginia colonel expresses it: but in the fasting time all such social laxities are avoided. "Women of a feather flock together" forming their own select afternoon entertainments and morning recreations—for the evening is unanimously kept for rest and sleep.

Lectures are coming in for a deal of attention: not merely those hours of instruction furnished by well-known and well-path travelers and short-story writers, but from lecturers whom the clique them-selves provide, the lecture to be given in some private drawing-room.

In fine, the etiquette of traveling is very like that which obtains anywhere among well-bred people. Such circumstances as being in a wreck would make it perfectly proper, it need hardly be said, for a lady to accept attentions from a strange gentleman that she could not accept under ordinary circumstances; but under the usual circumstances a lady will be grateful for and not resent the courtestes made possible by the routine of travel if they are proffered by a gentleman in a gentleman's way, distantly, respectfully, without any after-presuming; where they do not include the payment of money, and preferably are made through the medium of a raid servant of the cars, ship or hotel.

as he would like any other young man of his acquaintance to do if the young or old woman in the case were the sister or mother of the would-be-polite-but-perplexed youth.

Women adore little attentions. Even the strongest minded ones do. And a man who would be popular cannot too early find this out. He must not make his attentions offensively pointed, but if he manages to be extraordinarily civil, and more than that, thoughtul, and at the same time act as if he did whatever he does as a matter of course, he is goling to win golden opinions for his courtesy.

From raising or lowering a blind or window, to obtaining a function for one unable to herself get off a train by reason of indisposition or because she is caring for a child, etc., there is nothing a man may not offer with perfect propriety to do for an unknown woman, providing there is no porter who can assist her, and her own inability to wait upon herself is patent. But the well-bred man bristen hat as he asks to be allowed to be of service, makes his request in a chivairous fashion, with all sobriety, and whether his offer is or is not accepted the gentleman will not afterward presume to enter into conversation, or make any attempt to force an acquamtance out of the act of civility. The polite man who is willing to give up his steamer stateroom to accommodate an invalid or a woman traveling alone who by some mishap is unprovided with a resting place, does not proffer the courtesy of so much magnitude in person to the lady. He should ask the stewardess to do so, in order to save the lady to whom he would be merely chivairous the embarrasement of not being sure that the offer is made by a gentleman.

The polite man who finds himself the escort of ladies upon a journey, or one of a party, as on a large and long-continued excursion, during which everybody is put upon the footing of acquaintances, and thrown much into each other's society, may with propriety offer to do any of the offices that he would wish his sister to accept a the hands of a corresponding to 1 are devoted to the discussion of happenings, social, political, religious. In one club the lecturer is a clever young graduate of Smith College, who has been persuaded for the first time in her studious career to take up the position of expounder. Her reading necessarily is extensive, current magazines and newspapers having to be glanced over by hereach day. She gives in terse remarks a resume of the doings of the world to the ones who have gathered to listen. The girls who form the class declare that they also are studying quite hard; it is certainly true that they discuss vital topics with an interest and enthusiasm that indicates they are doing quite, a good bit of thinking on their own account.

Another style of lecture is listening to those interested in model architecture, plumbing, drainage, and all the various things about a house which its mistress should know to preserve pleasant by glenic conditions. These are given by a woman who has thoroughly mastered the situation, and illustrates her talks with blackboard diagrams.

One of the most delightful varieties in this epidemic of Lenten lectures are those given by Mrs. Howe of Brooklyn on the "Noble Art of Housewifery." They are divided into five parts, treating of house-keeping, past and present, the house one lives in—as to its ventilation, plumbing, ctc., domestic economy, servants and the purity of foods. These subjects are divided into five parts, treating of house-keeping, past and present, the house one charmingly told, making interesting the most commonplace details of housekeeping. FRENCH FASHION LETTER. EVENING DRESS AS SEEN AT PARIS GRAND OPERA.

Fans are Out of Date and Lorgnettes are the Vogue—Bouquets are No Longer Carried Save by Brides.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—(Special Correspondence.) Evening dress changes most in its accessories. I have observed this in looking over the operahouse. The gowns themselves do not show much variation from one season to another, for a low-

GOWN OF MYRTLE GREEN SATIN.

"What may a man do, and what may he not do with propriety during a journey in the course of which he is either accompanied by women, or thrown by chance into their company?" asks a young man of the period, who adds that his manners would be better doubtless it he aculd accompany. the period, who adds that his manners would be better, doubtless, if he could ever find out just what a well-bred woman is entitled to expect under the circumstances. The journey may be up and down in an elevator; it may be round the globe. In both cases and in all the events that may go between these extremes a very good rule for a young man to follow who is not quite sure of himself, is to act just as he would like any other young man of his acquaintance to do if the young or old woman in the case were the sister or mother of the would-be-polite-but-perplexed youth. necked bodice is always a low-necked bodice, whether square or round, and pale tinted materials are always about the same, but the jewel settings, the fan, the algrette, these ornamental details change wholly from time to time and the effect of the dress is sitered with them.

At the grand opera certain of these ornaments may be zeen in the different stages of progressive atrophy, while certain others once thought an essential part of evening dress have disappeared altogether. One needs to be careful about these details for not even an old gown makes one look half at least of speech, and for Southern women the fan was invented by Venus herself, "to heighten the graces of Beauty, to entice Zephyrs to attend on her and light Loves to slide into her breast," et cetera; but the Northern ideal has more or less triumphed, repose is now the word, and to flutter a fan in company is bad form. And it shows in the second place where to save a needless expense. Since its effect goes for nothing one's money is better saved to put into another gown or another toy. The thing to buy now is a jeweled lorgnette.

THE BOUQUET.

THE BOUQUET.

Bouquets, once a part of evening dress, have been relegated along with trained skirts and several other kickshaws to the

are no more seen with ordinary evening wear. The hands must not be cumbered; another sign of the changed ideal. THE HAIR.

Towering algrettes of jeweled feathers, Towering algreties of jeweled feathers, for so long an institution, have nearly disappeared. An undulating outline with no eccentric breaks in it is now the fashion, and if a tall algrette is here and there seen it only convicts a mode passing way. The hair is done with simplicity, much as in daytime, and as often low as high, and the ornaments are a twist of pearls, or long curved combs that form jeweled bands, or else artificial flowers, the last a fashion slowly gaining ground. A very new idea is an ornament placed on each side the head relatively as they are placed on hets, as Bernhardt wears the garland in "Olsmonda,"only not as large. EAR-RINGS.

Ear-rings today appear to be worn principally by elderly women. I don't know why. Perhaps because of a habit taken when young or because they fill up the hollows of sge. The great majority of fashionable women do not wear them.

Gems are set less frequently than they were into imitative forms of insects, flower sprays, crowns and crescent moons, which after a few times seeing grow tiresome if not ridiculous, but they are set very simply, with an idea alone of showing off their color and brilliancy. The latest idea is to set them single and to use them to stud the garment, as the front of a bodice, all over like stars.

THE LORGNETTE.

THE LORGNETTE.

The new toy of the opera box is a lorgnette. It is a curious substitute for the deliciously sentimental fan and Venus clearly had no hand in its making. Far from expressing soft sentiment it detracts absolutely from beauty by suggesting physical defect. But it is the mode. Every woman has one and has it bedisend with jewels and fastened to a jeweled chain in order to make it conspicuous.

EVENING GOWNS EVENING GOWNS.

with jewess and tastened to a jewesec chain in order to make it conspicuous.

EVENING GOWNS.

An ensemble of old rose moire white lace bertha, and black pansies placed as a boutonniere in one corner of the square decollete and as a garland over the opposite shoulder shows what an evening dress is like in this last half of the season. It is simple if costly and the touches of dark color are 'particularly artful. Such touches are used to give character to pale evening tints when seen at a distance, as across the operahouse or a ablitroom.

Strong color is used in touches with the same art and for the same purpose. Thus a black satin gown with white lace bertha has shoulder straps of turquoise blue velvet and turquoise jewels on the bodice front and in the hair.

White gowns are much worn for evening and will be also next summer. It is the fashion to add a single touch of color to these in a velvet band round the neck, which is made in gathers or folds with flanges behind or at each side, just as they are made for high-necked gowns. The color is oftenest cerise. In place of the band are also worn ruches of colored silk with fringed edges. This sort of necklace looks odd with the decollete, but not unpleasing. Instead of these necklets a color touch may be given with a mass of velvet flowers laid over one shoulder, but the effect is not so new and striking.

A black gown shows up jewels better than a colored one, and black velvet, white lace and diamonds make a tollette of the greatest distinction. A beautiful model has a square decollete blouse front framed in on each side with point applitique that passes over each shoulder and down under the arm to the belt, and this clear field of black is stadded over with diamonds. In place of diamonds a similar effect, if less brilliant, is obtained with iridescent spangles.

FOR STOUT WOMEN.

FOR STOUT WOMEN.

FOR STOUT WOMEN.

Every season seeks a new device for the dress of stout women, because the device of the last season has been direcvered. Scarf drapery is on one of the newest models, falling from each shoulder to the foot, caught at the waist line with plaits. It is carried out in mixed silk of fawn and gray, with scarves of brown velvet. The bodice is surplice, open in front, and white lace surrounds the neck and forms a vest framed on each side by the scarves. The two following remarkable tollettes deviate from the conventional order: The first is of myrtle-green sath that reflects its color under gaslight like a jewel. The bodice is cut in 1830 form, with the sleeves entirely off the shoulders in a perilous suggestiveness that is saved by extra straps running over the shoulders. They say this style will be much worn next summer. The straps and the neck are enriched with cut jet and mock emeralds and a bar of diamonds some six inches long reaches nearly across the front. The lair is done low and love, with no ornament. The gloves are beige.

The second tollette is all white. It is of satin; the bodice has the low neck cut ciraight across with the sleeves set on above, and the waist line in a rounded point in front, and the whole stiffened and ombroidered all over with pearls, giving the effect of a Marle de Medicis stomacher. The sleeves are formed of a ruffie of double satin, stiffened and made to flare. The halr is done rather high and strung with pearls.

A great many evening gowns are made with the steady a change with pearls.

double sailn, stiffened and made to nare. The hair is done rather high and strung with pearls.

A great many evening gowns are made with a black or white skirt and a colored bodice. In this way several different bodices may be worn with the rame skirt, which is a gain in economy. Thus Felix has just made for wear with white moire skirts ad dinner bodice of yellow velvet, the fromt en surplice, and a decollete bloom of the fan is important for two reasons. In the first place it shows that the ideal of manners has changed. We once took our inspiration from the South, where movement is one-half at least of speech, and for Southern women the fan was invented by Venus herself, "to heighten the graces of the first place it shows that the ideal of manners has changed. Those black-haired, slant-eyed little Japanese dolls that are to be seen nowadays can be made to do duty in many ways, both useful and ornamental. Clad in bright-colored garments of Japanese paper, orepon or soft silk, they can be easily converted into quaint lmick-knacks for the bureau and desk.

By providing one of the eight-inch chaps with a tiny box, which makes him look like a peddier, a very pretty pin tray will be produced. Dress the doll in a long, loose robe, reaching to his feet. Take an oblong cardboard box (a jeweiry box is just the thing) and on the front print the word "pins" in gold, making the letters resemble Japanese characters as much as resemble Japanese characters as much as a fan hung by her side, will add to the effect.

To make a penwiper, the head of a large doll will be required. Use for the foundation either red and yellow or black and yellow felt, either of which will produce the gay Japanese appearance. Cut three circles of increasing size, pink the edges and sew around the edge of each layer a plentiful supply of spangles. Fasten the head firmly in the center of the smallest circle. On the top of the head, where the bald spot is, cut a round hole and fill it with black felt, kid, or better still, with a tuft of bristles. This little novelty presents a very comic appearance when completed, and will brighten up a desk wonderfully. CAROLINE BEUCKMAN.

fortunes every one of these honest country trades are being adopted by their city sisters. The metropolitan girls are taking into the business little experience, but abounding enthusiasm, some money, and plenty of pluck. That they can easily make their pin money goes without saying, for eggs and poultry are marketable-necessities and the business is run on a cash basis.

Any woman who goes into the profession thinking she can scatter grain with one hand and gather eggs with the other will be sadly distillusioned when the time comes to prove it.

There is no necessity for a great outlay

This sport has succeeded the fashionable dairying that Marie Antoinette left as a whimsical legacy. English women have gone in for gardening, but the American woman's industry, is, of the three, the most difficult of success. In the other professions the dainty jeweled hands of the workers only reap the reward resultant from skilled and pahd labor, but in poultry-farming our fashionables prefer to work from inception to finish.

I asked the successful young woman referred to above what she considered some of the essentials for success.

"One acre of ground is sufficient to begin with," she informed me. "Of course, if a farm-yard adjoins the chickens are lucky. One can build a modern fowthouse for $5; in fact, mine cost only $3.85, but I supplied the glass sash at the top from the hothouse. I have discovered that twenty chickens provided with sustable food, dust boxes, clean nests, etc., will be more profitable than fifty birds carelessly kept on a farm.

"As for the profits, I have found that a hundred fowls kept for eggs and poultry yield a profit of $200 a year. Then I argue that 1900 with bring $2000 a nuclely. An ordinary hen pays 100 per cent. over what she eats.

"Country markets are superior to those in the city, for the price stands 3 cents or 4 cents higher in one than the other."

The figure is then haid on and farmly glued to a piece of stiff cardboard, on which may be inscribed in letters of gold: "A pin a day will fetch a groat a rear," or "See a pin, pick it up." Every woman possesses so many stick pins that a cushion to hold them is almost a necessity. The Japanese will lend its aid in providing one. How They Make One Wire Do the Work of Many-Shorthand as Applied in Telegraphy-Amusing Mistakes.

[From a Special Contributor-]

When Morse had sent his famous first nessage, "What hath God wrought?" over telegraph wire, it was thought that the years ago. Then there was no demand for anything swifter than electricity. Things have changed since then and elec-Trings have changed since then and elec-tricity, moving at the rate of 288,000 miles a second, is altogether too slow for pres-ent purposes, and so, to enable it to keep up with the procession, means have been devised by which its efficiency is doubled and quadrupled and otherwise multiplied, and its work reduced to a system of short-hand.

The first successful attempt of importance in the effort to increase the capacity of the telegraph was the invention of the duplex instrument. By duplex telegraphy is meant the sending of two messages simultaneously in opposite directions over the same wire. This was attempted as long ago as 1853 by Ginti in Vienna, and a number of other scientists experimented in the same direction afterward, but the first really successful effort was made by J. B. Stearns, a Boston man, a number of years later.

Almost as early as the experiment with duplex were those in the effort to effect quadruplex telegraphy; that is, the sending of four messages over a single wire at the same time, two in each direction. This was attempted by Dr. Stark in Vienna and the same time, two in each direction.

enna only two years after Gintl's experiments with duplex telegraphy, but this expedient also was first made practical by an American, Thomas A. Edison.

Not satisfied with even quadruplex telegraphy, numerous efforts have been made, with varying success, to accomplish what is known as multiple telegraphy; that is, the transmission of more than two messages in each direction over a single wire; but none are in general use. All these expedients—duplex, quadruplex and multiple telegraphy—involve instruments and processes too complicated and intricate to be explained in an article intended only for those not specially acquainted with electrical science. Suffice it to know that, marvelous as it may seem, duplex and quadruplex telegraphy are in practical operation every day on lines connecting the larger cities.

Another remarkable expedient in practical telegraphy is what is known as the Wheatstone system. The average operator by the ordinary method can send or receive about twenty-five or thirty words a minute. This is about as fast as the average penman can write. By the use of the Wheatstone method 300 or 350 words a minute can be sent or received over a single wire on a circuit in good working condition, thus making the wire do work equivalent to that of twelve or fourteen men sending by the ordinary method. By the use of the duplex in connection with the

be over all things.

Among the chief sources of our rejoicing will be the thought of our freedom from all. The Christian hates sin because it is displeasing in God's sight, yet in this earthly life of ours how often we are constrained to say. "When I would do good evil is present with me." Poor human nature is as prone to err as "the sparks are to fly upward." The history of altogether too many a Christian life is that of sinning and repenting. We do not lean sufficiently in times of temptation upon Him who has said: "My grace shall be sufficient for you," thus here we often crueify our Lord afresh. But there, in the glad light of the eternal presence there will be no yielding on our part to sin, for the love of God will envelop us like the sunlight and we shall drink of the rivers of His grace till the possibility of sin shall perish. Another charm of treuture life will be its enduring character. Heaven will be not everlasting home. That it is a place rather than a state of being we cannot doubt. It is the land of the "many mansions," where God more immediately reveals himself to His redeemed. "Here we see as through a glass darkly, but there face to face."

And "God is love." To dwell with love implies blessedness—love that is infinite, enduring and changeless. "But I am so unworthy of such love," you say, "and it is that thought which makes me afraid." But be not afraid, "O ye of little faith," and do not forget that "He remembereth our infirmities, He knoweth that we are but dust," and that "in all points He was tempted like as we are, yet without sin," It is this fact that makes His language to us today, "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

And His "rest" is peace, "the peace that passeth understanding." for if wheat closs dargedes: Mrs. W. O'Dounghue Miss and marked the second of the control of the March and Miss Jannie-formerly of Flind, Mich, but for a few happy years past residents of our "Otty of the Angels."

divided into pieces and given out to operators who write the messages out for delivery.

The advantage of the Wheats'one system lies in the greater service which can be imposed on a single wire, rather than in reducing the number of operators. It is of especial utility when storms have interfered with the wires and but few are in working order. While the wires are lown and communication is cut off, a lozen punchers may be preparing the messages received for transmission, and as soon as a single wire is restored to working order, the messages can be sent by a dozen operators with a lozen wires. The advent of the typewriter opened the way for greatly increased efficiency in telegraphy. It requires a good penman to write continuously at the rate of thirty words a minute and an exceptionally rapid one to write forty words a minute; but with a typewriter twice that speed may be attained. However, a good penman could copy as rapidly as a correspondingly good sender could put the matter of the wire, so the typewriter was of no especial benefit so far as speed was concerned until some more rapid method of sending could be devised. This lack on the part of the sender has been met by the invantion of what is known as

The following sentence is given, not on account of its grammatical construction, but to show the application of the code: "It is understood that the coroner's jury will consider the circumstance important as bearing on the facts in the case, in connection with which their verdict promises to be eensational, and it is expected to create great excitement." It will be seen that less than half as many letters are used in the abbreviated form will be seen that less than half as many letters are used in the abbreviated form as are required to spell the sentence out in full.

A thorough familiarity with the code enables the operator employing it to send as fast as an expert with the typewriter can copy. As may be supposed, the mental strain is severe upon the receiver who copies with the typewriter for a long time continuously when the sender uses the code freely, and it is only the most expert operators and those of many years' practice who are able to do this kind of work. The code is used mainly in transmitting matter for the press. By means of it one man in St. Louis, I. N. Sharpnack, operator of the leased wire of the Republic, extending to Washington and New York, received and wrote out 22,500 words, equivalent to fifteen ordinary newspaper columns, in nine hours.

Many peculiarly annoying combinations rush into the ears of a "code" receiver, both because of abbreviated words coming too close together and of spelled-out words being too elightly spaced. Few of these escape the operator's notice, however, if he is sufficiently alert. By using "d" of the code for "in the" the phrase "in the inner room" is likely to be copied "dinner room," and if the "c!" in "city" is not very carefully spaced, the sentence, "He was in the city," will be written "He was dirty." During the baseball season a prominent Western newspaper, in the course of a report of a game, mentioned that one of the players "got his bob." The sporting editor of the paper was, during the next few days, flooded with letters asking the meaning of that new baseball phrase. Then the leased-wire operator was called on for an explanation, and he confessed that in his haste he had copied the abbreviation "bob" without thinking that it meant "base on balls."

A few years ago a prominent New York paper announced in big headlines the arrival at St. Paul of "Yo King." It was scarcely an hour after the paper was on the streets before about every telegraph operator in the United States knew that "i

Tweed, superintendent of the street department. Having made themselves supreme in Tammany Hall, the men so worked the city elections as to control the city government, placing themselves, in 1866, each in the office he wished. A new charter, of which they secured the adoption, gave them absolute charge of the city's purse. Magnitude of the Chicago Fire. (March Scribner:) In October, 1871, the city was devastated by one of the most ter rible conflagrations of modern times. It began on Sunday evening, the 8th. Not till Tuesday morning was the headway of the fire checked, and parts of the charred debris smouldered on for months. Nearly three and a half-square miles were burned over; 17,450 buildings were destroyed; 98,500 persons rendered homeless; and 200 killed. The total direct loss of property amounted to $200,000,000, which indirect losses of various sorts would swell to perhaps $250,000,909, nearly a third of the city's valuation. Forty-four million dollars was recovered on insurance, a small part of the sum insured for, as fifty-seven of the companies involved were rendered insolvent by the fire.

The play is in five acts and seven scenes, and the curtain in all cases, except one, falls upon a melange of quiet, intense, dramatic action, beautifully interwoven with sparkling comedy. With an augmented cast and a large force of auxiliaries, including the crack drill corps of Co. C. HYGIENIC FACTS, FADS AND FANCIES.

One of the most noteworthy features of social development during the past twenty years has been the increasing interest which is taken by the general public in hygienic and sanitary matters. Those of us who have reached middle age can easily remember the time when the consideration of such matters was left entirely to the medical fraternity, much in the same way as men were in the habit of leaving the management of their spiritual affairs to a pastor and of their worldly possessions to a lawyer. In fact it would have been thought almost pre sumptuous for a non-medical person to question in any way the dictum of the pompous, fussy old gentleman with a "choker" and a gold-headed cane who came to feel your pulse, look wise, shake his head, write some dog gerel Latin in an incomprehensible handwriting and then bow himself out while the rest of the family stood around with bated breath. Nowadays, however, almost every schoolboy and schoolgiri can give points on health topics, and it is difficult to take up a paper or magazine that does not con some article on the subject written in a popular vein, while quite a number of periodicals are devoted entirely to hygienic matters.

The various schools of hygienists who have sprung into existence during the past twenty years are very numerous, almost as numerous in fact as the multitudinous religious sects which flourish in this country. America and Germany seem to be especially active in this branch of investigation. Among the earliest systems of this kind that were introduced was that of hydropathy or water cure. Germany was the home of this system, but it was soon adopted widely in England and America. The number of striking cures that were effected in this manner made it quite the rage for a time, and it still has a strong foothold. The is with this, as with other hygienic ideas, that it was run to extremes, and in some cases dangerous extremes. People would be half drowned in ice cold water in such a manner that only the most robust constitution could stand the shock, and in consequence of this the practice of hydropathy for a time fell into disrepute. When utilized in a sensible manner there is no more powerful remedy in the world than pure water in the shape of bandages, packs and baths, also as steam. There are in Germany, as well as in this country. a number of establishments in which a specialty is made of the water cure. nbined with plain dietary, sunbaths, and massage; and any one who has spent even a brief time in one of these institutions cannot fail to have been witness of many remarkable cures that have been accomplished, frequently in cases where the patient had been given up altogether by a physician of the regular school.

Another school of hygienic reform which has been in existence for a would need a column of space. Most number of years and has obtained a strong foothold is that of vegetarian-The vegetarians are also divided into different branches, some of them being more strict than the others in their ideas. Some exclude milk, butter, cheese and eggs from their die tary, while a few have gone so far as to eat nothing that is cooked, living on raw vegetables, fruit and grain colony which lives in this manner in Orange county, in the neighborhood of Fullerton. Most of the vegetarians, however, are content to eschew flesh food, some of them even indulging occasionally in a little

There is no doubt that, in the United States at least, far too much flesh food is consumed. If people would be con tent to eat meat once a day their ealth would be improved, especially in the case of those who have little muscular exercise. The vegetarians have done much to instill this fact into the public mind, and so far have acnplished good. Like many other reforms, however, they are inclined to hat the mere relinquishment of flesh food as a diet is the only secret of ith, long life and even morality. public.

mit greater excesses in dietary than an ordinary citizen who takes his occasional chop or beefsteak. Some of them seem to think of little else than their stomachs and gorge themselves three times a day with a mass of slowdigesting food that might do very wellfor a ruminating cow but adapted to the wants of a thinking and acting human being who has to keep up his place in the battle of life

as it is waged nowadays. As to the possibility of living and having health and strength without the use of flesh food there is no room for question. In fact, two-thirds, of the human race are vegetarians, or almost entirely so, while of the remaining third a majority never dream of eating meat at every meal. Some of the strongest races of the world and those who possess the most endurance are vegetarians. They do not, however, live on cabbages and pumpkins and beet-roots, but on such foods as grain, figs and beans, which contain from two to three times as much nourishment, weight for weight, as the same amount of meat. In point of variety the vegetarians, in fact, have the best of it. The variety of food that is offered by the vegetable kingdom is far greater than that of flesh foods During the past few years there has sprung up another school of dietary, which teaches that the vegetarians are all wrong. These people call themselves fruitarians, saying that the whole-meal bread upon which vegetarians chiefly rely-or any other kind of bread-is not the "staff of life" but the "staff of death." They say-and a good many physicians have recently indorsed their ideas to this extentthat old age is caused by deposits of lime which accumulate in the human body, stiffening the joints, and that by avoiding food which contains much lime life may be greatly prolonged They claim that the natural food of man is fruit and nuts, and on this they subsist entirely, sometimes adding a little salad, or olives or cream cheese or some mild dissipation of that kind. Many of them never touch any variety of liquids, even water, from one year to the other, obtaining their water from the fruit they consume, which is, of course, as pure and soft as it can be obtained, having been filtered through the limbs and twigs of the trees. The trouble in this case again is that a person has to consume a very large and bulky amount of provender to ob tain the necessary nourishment; in short, he has to devote too much time

gaged in business enterprises. There is another school of reformer known as Ralstonites, who are said to number over a million adherents. They hold to the same theory in regard to the cause of old age as the fruitarians, and make a strong point of drinking only distilled water. Otherwise they approve of a plain, wholesome dietary, composed of mixed vegetable an mineral food. A branch of this society was recently organized in Los An-

One of the latest and most peculiar theories of hygiene is that which is known as orificial surgery, of which there is a representative in Los Angeles who claims to be the discoverer of the idea. According to this cult the seat of all evil, physical, mental and moral, is located at a point in the interior of the human body where all the nerves combine, and any effort at cure, whether it be for an impaired digestion, insanity, a sore toe, or propensity to commit murder, must be de at this point. To merely mention all the other ideas in relation to hygiene which have come into existence during the past dozen years or so, such as walking barefoot sunbaths, electricity and so forth, of these theories contain a germ of truth, but the trouble is that, as a rule, those who stumble upon an idea of this kind are apt to ride their hobby to death and to imagine that they have discovered the philosopher's stone, or the fabled fountain of Ponce de Leon which was supposed to give perpetual youth. The most encourag ing feature of the case is that these investigations and studies as to the laws of health are weaning people from the old school of drug medica tion which treated every disease with something out of a bottle-"None genuine unless the name is blown in the glass"-and if one bottle did not do. why, then, they tried another, until the patient died, or got well, as the case might be. People are beginning to think for themselves in regard to the rules of health and life, and before long we may hope to see more frequently exemplified the truth of the old saying that "Every man is a fool or a physician at 40."

SENATOR WHITE INTERVIEWED

Elsewhere The Times this morning es an interview with Senato Stephen M. White, who has just re-turned to his home in this city from Washington. What Senator White has to say regarding the prospects of the Pedro harbor improvement is highly interesting, and at the same time is very encouraging to the friend of that harbor site. He regards the outlook for an appropriation at the next session of Congress as good, and thinks the changes in the personnel of the Senate Committee on Commerce will give a majority in favor of San Pedro. As to the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors he is not so certain, but hopes that a California mem ber will be appointed on that commit This will rest in the discretion of Mr. Reed, who will undoubtedly be the next Speaker of the House.

Senator White thinks there will be struggle in the next Congress to enact a Pacific railroad funding bill, and a railroad pooling bill. He expresses a fear that the next House will ook favorably upon both measures unless the people bestir themselves. The Times hardly shares this fear, out eternal vigilance is none the less to be desired. The Senator procured an appropriation of $5000 for the improvement of the Federal building in this city, and expresses a strong hope that further appropriations for the adequate improvement of the building may be obtained at the next long session of Congress. Several Senators and Representatives will visit this Coast during the Congressional interim, and Sen ator White believes that these visits will result in opening their eyes to the importance of our interests and needs

A RECORD OF INCAPACITY.

We have yet to see an unbiased word of commendation for the Democratic Congress which has just passed into history. It has left no record for good accomplished for the benefit of the people of the country. The Review of Reviews in summing up its history very pertinently remarks:

"Strong superlatives are seldom jus-tified. Nevertheless it would not seem ill-advised to declare that the whole financial history of modern nations furnishes no instance of incapacity so great, of statesmanship so utterly wanting of common sense so pitiably abdicated, as our own country has abdicated, as our own country has shown in the past two years. There has been frittered away the highest public credit that any nation had ever attained; and this change has been wrought when no difficulties whatever existed except the one difficulty that the party in power could not agree upon any policy. Whatever President Cleveland and the New York banking upon any policy. Whatever President Cleveland and the New York banking interests may think, the people of the United States do not want long-time, interest-bearing bonds issued in times peace. The people would unque tionably have preferred an issue of short-time treasury certificates of one sort or another to meet temporary exigencies, and a prompt levy of sufficient new taxes to bring current revenues up to the point of meeting amply both nt expenditures and also all sks imposed by the necessity taining the gold reserve maintaining naintaining the gold the interchangeability sorts of money. It is to be gretted that everybody at Wington might not have been ing at least to agree upon some plan which would prevent the use of the outstanding greenbacks as an endthe outstanding greenbacks as an end less chain for drawing gold out of the

DEEPLY HUMILIATING.

An article in the Review of Reviews for March states a familiar truth in concise form, as follows: "The bargain that Secretary Carlisle had made with prominent New York bankers was, in fact, concluded with those financiers as representatives of the Rothschilds and other large European and other pean investors, and our government was allowed a premium which made was allowed a premium which made the interest rate equivalent to 33-4 per cent. When it is remembered that Sec-retary Windom only a few short years ago was readily able to borrow money per cent., and that he actually did extend at this low rate large blocks of bonds which were about to become payable, it is deeply humiliating to re-flect that now, in a time of profound peace, when the comparative stagnation of private enterprise has piled up both of private enterprise has piled up both in Europe and America vast quantities of capital seeking safe investment in public securities, our government should be compelled to pay 3 3-4 per cent. All of our outstanding bonds are payable in "coin," and as a matter of fact our government has never attempted to pay off any of its obligations in any other than the very best kind of dollars in existence."

There is no doubt that the administration might have placed the entire loan at as low a figure as 21-2 per cent., and perhaps as low as 2 per cent., had it chosen to do so. That the credit of the nation has declined under Democratic management is merely a case of history's repeating itself; but it has not yet reached so low an ebb as some of the recent transactions of the Treasury Department seem to indicate.

The Sacramento Record-Union very truly says that if the chivalric spirit in man is growing weak, "the women have only themselves to blame. So many of them manifest so much of selfishness and disregard for the rights of others that it is not at all surprising that men are gradually coming to treat them with disregard of that fine spirit which has heretofore been the protec tion of woman and has made her se cure throughout the land, and her sex a guarantee of the most respectful treatment." This is a fact worth thinking about, and is well stated. The aggressive, jostling, loud-voiced "new woman," if she descends to the rough-and-tumble struggle for exist-ence which is the lot that most men are born to, must not expect to receive the same reverence as was freely accorded her when she stood apart upon a pedestal of sanctity. She will be required to give and take blows, and to assume the heavy responsibil-ities of citizenship if she is to share fully in its alleged privileges. Fur-thermore, many of the laws which are now especially partial to women must be repealed. The leveling process, once thoroughly inaugurated, must be carried out to its logical seque

TO RESTRICT IMMIGRATION.

The Immigration Restriction League with headquarters at Boston, has drafted a bill for presentation to the next Congress, embodying two of the many possible remedies for the evils of immigration. The bill proposes to increase the head-tax on immigrants from $1 each to $10, and to exclude all immigrants between the ages of 14 and 60 years who are unable to read and write the English language or some other language. The Executive Committee of the league believe it is wise to start with a noderate increase of the head-tax, and not to complicate the proposed bill with too many other restrictions. It is believed that a simple measure, embodying only two or three important propositions, will stand a much better chance of passage than would a more lengthy and complex measure. The committee says that the present head-money ($1) is in practice collected from the steamship companies, who reimburse themselves by increas ing the steerage rates. The head-tax proposed is not in any true sense a property qualification, but is designed to secure for us a better class of immigrants by making the expense of coming here greater. The extremely low rates of steerage passage from Europe to the United States ($12 to $18 on the average,) make it possible for almost any discontented pauper to come to this country, while the fares to Australia. South Africa and South America ($65 on the average) are sufficiently high to exclude most of such undesirable persons from those countries. The quality of immigration when higher passage rates prevailed was decidedly superior to that which has come to us during the past few years.

The proposed reading and writing qualification would have excluded 19 per cent, of the immigration during the year ending June 30, 1894. This is regarded as the most important test that can be adopted, both as a necessary preparation for citizenship and for universal suffrage, and also as a means of assimilation. This test has the great merit that it can be easily and surely applied. The precise wording adopted permits persons over 60 years of age who may be unable to read and write to join their relatives in this country, and also allows the immigration of all children still of school age.

An advertisement printed on the back of a transfer ticket issued by a tramway company of London, reads as follows:

"The unemployed in East London a time when much thought is being given to this matter a practical suggestion may be of service. Last more than £300,000 worth of f matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country (England,) to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that 'Evil is wrought by want of thought as well as by want of heart.' If all consumers would purchase smatches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages."

This is good protection doctrine home consumption for home manufacturers. It is a little surprising to find such a doctrine advocated in the freetrade paradise. But then, the above advertisement was printed for local circulation only. When it comes to a discussion with outsiders, your British manufacturer—whether of matches or of tinplate—is a rampant and uncom-promising advocate of free trade.

The agitation of the big theater hat question is not likely to be without some good results, whether any legisation is enacted or not. The universal protest against the objectionable headgear will no doubt lead many women to respect public opinion to the extent of wearing small-sized hats to e theater, or removing their overing altogether during the performance. At all events, women with a fine sense of justice, and with a roper regard for the rights of others. will refuse to wear hats of inordinate size at the theater, the church, or any other place of public assemblage.

The San Francisco Call proposes to est the constitutionality of the incomtax law on its own account. It will resist payment and appeal to the courts. Perhaps the proprietor of the Call might save some money and at the same time acquire the knowledge which he desires by watching the outcome of the test case now pending before the Supreme Court of the United States, which will doubtless be decided within the next few days. But then there's the advertisement that Companyero Shortridge would lose-he needs that in his business.

Gen. James B Weaver will be prom inently identified with the new party which is about to be formed with free silver coinage as its sole plank. Gen. Weaver announced a few months ago that he had permanently retired from politics-though nobody supposed he had been in politics for a dozen years past. But now, it seems, he has con sented to emerge from his seclusion ong enough to hoodoo the new silver party. This is not absolutely neces sary, however. Populist indorsement s enough to hoodoo the party, without Gen. Weaver's assistance

The hope that some definite good will be accomplished by the coming international bimetallic conference is gaining ground. A strong bimetallic sentiment is manifesting itself in both France and Germany, while even in England considerable sympathy is expressed toward the movement. It is not expected that England will embrace bimetallism, but the hope is expressed that the British government will consent to the reopening of the mints of India to free silver coinage. This would be a distinct gain for silver. If England will concede that much, and Germany, France and the United States agree to act in concert, a stable ratio for silver, with practi-cally free and unlimited coinage, can be established and maintained, to the concerned, and, in fact, of all the comnercial nations of the earth.

Aluminium cannon are mentioned as among the possibilities of the near fu-ture. A Canadian blacksmith claims to have discovered a rew method of tempering the metal, and structed a small cannon which is soon to be thoroughly tested at Quebec Aluminium is but little heavier than wood, and artillery constructed of it could certainly be transported over than is possible with the heavy guns at present in use.

The Call says very truly that "If we manufactured the articles we use that are made of California material we could give employment to all our workof our thoughtful consideration. California might be one of the richest manufacturing States in the Union if we but utilized our resources and did the work ourselves which we leave Eastern manufacturers to do for us, How long shall this state of things

Reports from institutions for the insane in Ireland mention tea-tippling as among the causes of permanent insanity. One of these days we shall find American legislators racking their great intellects over anti-tea bills in the State legislatures. It is also a well-established fact that plum-pudding is not the best thing for the digestion. Why not have anti-plum-pudding legislation? And anti-cold-slaw

Who dares assert that the late Congress did not accomplish anything? In repealing protection, destroying American industries, creating a good market for bonds, and emptying the poor man's dinner pail, it was a shining success that the people of, the country will not be slow to forget.

There is some consolation in the hought that when the "new woman" really and truly arrives in all her puissant majority, she will be obliged to take off her hat at the theater just like a mere man. She is not to enjoy any privileges nor immunities on ac count of sex.

Fascination strange, divine, complete, Descriptionless, subtie, unreasoning. I met her first within her father's home; She played and sang and talked as people do; I called again. The feeting time passed on; Upon her gentle form my interest grew; Her voice seemed sweeter to my listening ear; Each word she spoke revealed a character Affectionate, and every time she sang Her dear, sweet voice pursued through darkening streets, In dull routine of trade, at busy bank, Rang through my ears, and every night I called Waves of pleasure crossed my hungering soul. The hurrying time so long till next we met! The land on both sides of the county road, A barrel full of gold, all Croesus' wealth, I'd give for her. And svery single time She speaks to me, or sings, my raptured ear Drinks in the sound like sweetest melody. I could in her fond face torever gaze; She is my future life. THE BRAVEST OF BATTLES.

The bravest battle that ever was fought, Shall I tell you where, and when? On the maps of the world you'll find it not; "Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot, With sword or nobler pen; Nay, not with eloquent word or thought From mouth of wonderful men.

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart— Of woman that would not yield, But bravely, silently bore her part— Lo! there is the battle-field.

No marshaling troop, no bivouac song, No banner to gleam and wave! But O, these battles! they last so long— From babyhood to the grave! JOAQUIN MILLER. AN END.

Love, strong as Death, is dead; Come, let us make his bed Among the dying flowers; A green turf at his head, And a stone at his feet, Whereon we may sit In the quiet evening hours.

He was born in the spring,
And died before the harvesting,
On the last warm summer day
He left us; he would not stay
For autumn twilight, cold and gray,
Sit we by his grave and sing
He is gone away.

To few chords sad and low
Sing we so;
Be our eyes fixed on the grass
Shadow-veiled as the years pass,
While we think of all that was In the long ago.

We can cheerfully forego a few days' f our accustomed sunshine if the clouds till bring the rain which is due about this time. It is needed to round out the n's full measure of prosperity.

The Grocery World, published at Phil-delphia, refers in complimentary terms to the Southern California Fruit Exchange, as

"The Southern California Fruit Exchange is the most unique organization of its kind in the world. It is composed of eight county exchanges, all working hand in hand for one purpose—to establish a home market at that point, and notwithstanding the disastrous season of last year it successfully lifted the business from a state of chaos and established the marketing of its product upon business principles."

"The boycott and the blacklist are equally brutal. They tend to violence and will not be countenanced by the Porton."

It would seem that this fact might have been discovered earlier. This significant confession comes from a journal that was one of the most vicious, reckless and dishonest enemies of The Times during its contest with the now beaten boycotters. The new management, however, carefully repudi-ates all connection with the brokendown gang that it has left in the rear

California will reap incalculable benefit from the widespread demand for her oranges and other fruits this year. The benefit will extend far into the years to come. The people of the East will learn the true value of our products as they have never learned it before. Every carload of oranges sent into a new market will be an excellent advertisement for this State, and will certainly make a demand for more. No severe competition is likely to be felt from Florida for four or five years to come, and by that time California products will have established them selves so thoroughly in afi the Eastern markets that no future competition can dislodge them. Our exchanges are proceeding on the right plan in not raising prices to exorbitant figures, allowing the demand to keep ahead rather than behind their prices. Altogether, the outlook for California products was never better than The people of the East will learn nia products was never better than

The Eagle people desire, when the "juel" takes form, to put up their single-standard, North American dollars on the late pilot on the Mississippi and

For Marcus of the two has certainly seen enough cutting and shooting along the Comstock to enable him to perforate a few of Mr. O'Rell's vitals with neatness and dispatch.

It is the private opinion of the Eagle fraternity, publicly expressed, that if

As to what Marc said to stir the Ire of Mr. O'Rell, that is another story. What the Eagle wants to get in on is the fight when it commences.

The trouble is it probably won't The trouble is it probably won't commence, and that is quite a pity, for a real red-handed shooting-match with a man for a target at each end of the range is difficult to steer a son of sunny. France up against—he always wants to do business with one of those long, slim stabbers such as actor people lug around and tangle themselves up it the scenery with and fall over ple lug around and tangie themselves up in the scenery with, and fall over. Marc would probably feel a bit lost with that kind of a fighting layout, but give him a robust gun, and it is the opinion on this perch that he would make a showing for his native land that would do it proud.

Let the battle begin.

Field caught cold while sitting on a rock at 3 a.m., waiting to bag a lot of snipes who were billed to fly down the Arroyo Seco at that hour.

Don't you believe it!

The wild and woolly poet of pork brought that cold out here with himin fact, it was a case of pneumonia when the cars pulled out from Chicago, but by leafing around California a few when the cars pulled out from Chicago, but by loafing around California a few weeks Eugene got his bent and flab-bdrgasted old lung sufficiently tinkered up to enable him to keep out of the way of the carniverous mountain lions, as well as the snipes.

Don't you believe for a minute that Mr. Field would go out anywhere at 3 a.m. where a snipe could bite him.

The Eagle bird's ancient and honor able friend, Charley Dana of the New York Sun, which shines for a good many, is having more or less business with sheriffs and such as that, for crank.

Charley gets up a great newspaper over in the American Siberia, but he does call names and slam around reckless, worse than most anybody who prints things. If Mr. Noyes of Washington succeeds in curbing the tendency of the "old man" to read riot acts regardless of reason or riot, a great many people will be much obliged to him. Let Charley Dana take a back seat and give somebody else a chance to have his way for a while.

San Francisco has commenced to agitate, for a half-million population. Well, they won't have to build any houses for them, for there are enough vacant houses up there now to fix that all right. This is a curious world; up by the bay they are setting snares to trap tenderfeet and make them settle down and be happy, and here we couldn't drive them away with a club. Of course there isn't any reason for this, it is just the cussedness of the tenderfoot. Why, certainly! Sure!

The swell bicycle club of Eugene Field's Porkopolis, which recently organized, has issued an edict "No pants." Any lady found wearing any others than those she makes with her breath after climbing a hill will be thrown out and called names, and probably otherwise maltreated. The 400 of Chicago doesn't propose to be doubled up into 800 by the girls wearing of things, if they know themselves.

The flesta, with its glitter, shine, boom-ta-ra-ra, and flutter of color, is sneaking along this way mighty fast. It is going to be a great big, beautini, instructive show—the greatest this end of the country has seen for several big round moons. There will be some of the most brilliant and picturesque parades that ever trailed their way along the thoroughfares of any city on the continent. Poetry, music, art, science, industry and all the other things that make civilization attractive will be set out by the hands attractive will be set out by the hands of men and women who know their business, and one astonisher will follow so close upon the heels of another during the April jubilee that even the people who are doing the hard work of the carnival will be happly surprised.

The Eagle gets this information with his telescopic eye and his famous astral intellect, so you can depend upon it. Any person within reaching distance of this metropolis who does not appear here and become a subject of the queen of the carnival will be making a never-to-be-repaired mistake. Come, everybody, and have fun with us!

The "hold-up" department of the daily papers is rapidly becoming a fixture. What a pity the penitentiaries cannot say as much regarding the "hold-uppers."

The girl suffrage bill has been sat upon by the Senate, and California is, for a time at least, spared from the ravages of what Ambrose Bierce calls "them loud colonels." The Eagle is nothing if not deferential am gallant to the sex which makes this drear old world a paradise. Being as foolishly fond of them as he is—fond of them in the old-fashioned way, and believing that they are just exactly right as they are, he rejoices in the Senate's nerve and horse sense. Lovely woman has no more faithful and sincere admirer than the bird up here, whose has no more faithful and sincere admirer than the bird up here, whose golden pinions (freshly gilded at a cost of 'steen dollars) are kissed by the sunshine and fanned by the breeze, and that is why he exults and screams his delight at the suppression of the pushing portion of that lik who fain would displace the creature of his adorns.

ing so big that the world is talking about us, and writing pleasant things about us-our climate, our public spirit, our beauti ful Citrus Fair, and the expected glory of the coming flests. And our blossoming gardens and hillsides! How the strangers who are with us open their eyes in de lighted wonder at all the budding and blos coming that they see on every hand.

I met a lady the other day who had just come in from viewing the poppy-covered hillsides of Pasadena, and she was fairly bubbling over with delight. "It is a dream of beauty," she exclaimed. "It is as if one of the brightest sunset clouds had dropped down and wrapped the hills in its mantle. I have read about the streets of the New Jerusalem which are of pure gold, but never had I read of the hills of California with the pure gold of their popples. No one can comprehend their beauty without seeing ft, and I

"And you have been to our Citrus Fair?" inquired.

"Yes, and that was another marvel. I do not wonder that California is called the 'Golden State,' for it is golden from its poppy-covered hillsides to its great or-chards and the splendor of its sunshine. I am going back East shortly to sell every thing I own there, for I shall never be content to make my home anywhere outside of

I have met many people who feel as this I have met many people who feel as this lady did, and who as soon as they can "sell out back East" will come here to enjoy life, away from the chill and discomfort of Eastern winters and the sultry heat of its summers. We shall have a welcome for them all, and we shall watch the development of Los Angeles and the country about it with the delight which every one feels in seeing the good things of life appreciated and shared by others.

The fog has been hovering over us for a few days, gray and cool, but there are many among us who are proposing to climb for a day or so above the fog into the clear brightness of the sternal sunshine. Echo Mountain is beckening to us from above the fog, and there is the great telescope through which we may see the moon's eclipse and study the march of stars and the revolutions of worlds, while Mother Earth lies below us fog-enveloped, buried in a white shroud, as blank and still as if death had touched her and left nothing but this ghostly whiteness. Los Angeles will come to love this mount of vision, which nearly all the year stands face to face with the sun by day, and with the moon and stars in the stilly night. Clouds and fogs may roll at its base, and girdle there like a garment, but its creet stands in the clear shining of unhindered light like the soul that is borne upward on the wings of faith to the clear shining of celestial brightness.

No one should visit this section without making a visit before leaving to this modern Pisgah of vision, from whence they may look abroad over the land, the vision extending from the mountains to the sea, and taking in green valleys and sleeping plains, cities and hamlets and the silver thread of rivers rolling onward to the sea. It is a panorama that is not easily forgotten.

SACRAMENTO, March 9.—(Special Correspondence.) The decision of the Los Angeles delegation to abide by the salary schedule, prepared with the assistance of Messrs. Vercoe and Wood, with the exception of an amendment reducing the force in the treasurer's office to one chief deputy at a salary of $125, may be a disappointment to retremphers in the "City of the ment to retrenchers in the "City of the Angels," but the delegation think it the data furnished by the expert of the Citizens' Reform League was a disappointment in their that the did not cover more ground in the way of the cost of conducting county offices for other months than that of December, 1894. The data furnished by Deputy Auditor Wood was more complete, though of course it did not enter into the question of scomomy, as such, like that statements of Mr. Griffith and Mr. Bird, for the simple reason that Mr. Wood was acting under instructions from his chief, and it is no likely that any of the county officers desire to drop their deputies to the extent recommended by the Citizens' League representatives. However, the delegation decided at the outset that the present cost of running the offices should be taken as a basis, salaries to be regulated where necessary to bring them inside the law. The matter of equalization was a nice one, and it was here that the delegation found its chief difficulties. The argument of Mr. Griffith in favor of a lump sum to the heads of departments, who should pay their deputies according to the requirements of the position, therefore met with great favor, but the plan could not be put into operation, as it might result in increasing the salaries of the heads of departments. It is expected, however, that two years hence an effort will be made to introduce a new county government bill, in which the lump sum method will be a feature.

The constitutional sixty days of legislation ended yesterday, and the statesmen are now desirous of returning home as soon as possible. The various big measures that were expected to cause prolonged discussion were advolity hustled through from one house to the other, and Speaker Lynch vied with President protem from the secret, was the ease with which the Courty Division Bill was killed. Senator Linder gave the "divisionists" the "double-cross" in the most approved style, and knocked out his bill with a neatness and dispatch that is still the talk ready convinced that there were more bugs in it than in any other bill before the House.

Mr. Bulla has been holding the Assemblymen chosely to their tasks, and his influence with the best element in the lower house becomes more and more marked. It has become a matter of comment among the newspaper men and clerks that he so strongly directs the sentiment of the Right, while Mr. Pendleton, who sits just across the centrel aits from him, has developed considerable strength in mampulating the Left. The latter's handling of the fight for the Scalpers' Bill was a very smooth piece of work. There remain two measures which the friends of the Southern Pacific will mass in force to carry. One is the Lynch bill, No. 702, abolishing stopower privileges, and the other is Assembly bill No. 382, which grants extraordinary privileges to the street-car combine in San Francisco. The stories of boodle which accompanied the passage of the Scalpers' Bill are revived in connection with these bills, though it is not chaimed that the actual distribution of the coin is made by members of the Assembly.

The division of the San Francisco delegation over the bill to abolish the life tenure of the Police Commissioners of that city is not surprising since it was made on party lines, and Gov. Budd has practically made it a party question. The Assembly evidently looked at it in that light also, for it voted the bill down. Some objection was raised to excusing Timothy Guy Phelps from voting, but he was eventually excused. Mr. Phelps its said to have taken a disilike to the Lexow

Two constitutional amendments were withdrawn and one defeated. Since that time much other business has been transacted and at least four bills have been signed by the Governor. The County Government Bill was finally passed Friday, as also the bills appropriating $250,000 to erect buildings in San Francisco for affiliated branches of the State University, and $50,000 for buildings at Berkeley; the Mathews bill appropriating $5000 for the farniture and apparatus for the Los Angeles Normal School, and the Seymour bill providing for the deficiency in the appropriation for the support of the Southern Insane Asylum for the forty-fifth and forty-sixth fiscal years. Reld of Trinity questioned the motives of Mr. Bulla in recommending that the Seawell bill, appropriating $147,280 for erection of buildings and improvements at the Mendocine Asylum, and which had an adverse report from the Ways and Means Committee, should be reported back from the committee of the whole with the recommendation that it do not pass. Reld said it was strange that the gentleman from Los Angeles opposed every appropriation from Northern California, but had never been tion that it do not pass. Reid said it was strange that the gentleman from Los Angeles opposed every appropriation from Northern California, but had never been heard to open his mouth against an appropriation for Southern California institutions. Buila rose to a question of personal privilege, and in a stirring speech said it was a shame that his motives should be impugned on sectional grounds. He was tired—he was weary of having this question of Northern and Southern California raised every time he opposed a measure. Sectional interests had never influenced his vote. They had but three little institutions in Southern California, against the numerous ones in Northern California, which were drawing money from the State. When it came to a matter of personality he would rather be a citizen of Southern California than a fossilized man from the mountains of the North.

Reid then jumped to his feet and yelled out that he would rather be a citizen of Southern California than a fossilized man from the mountains of the North.

Reid then jumped to his feet and yelled out that he would rather be a fossilized man from the mountains than a one-lunger from the South. It was well known that no man could come to the Legislature unless he had one lung, and that if a man was found in Los Angeles with two lungs he was compelled to leave that part of the State. Pendleton here arose to a question of privilege, and his goodly proportions taken into consideration with Reid's remark about one-lungers caused question of privilege, and his goodly proportions taken into consideration with Reid's remark about one-lungers caused the Legislature to break into a laugh that temporarily disposed of the subject. Reid, however, got into hot water when a few minutes later he referred slightingly to the Jewish merchants of San Francisco, in connection with Assembly bill No. 561, proposing to lessen expenses necessary for an insolvent debtor to turn over his goods to his creditors, in which bill Reid is interested. Bettman, Dinkelspiel and Powers of San Francisco "jumped" Reid, and he received a good tongue-lashing.

The Governor on Friday vetoed the Bulla bill providing that there shall be no limitations to actions to recover money or other property deposited with banks, bankers, trust companies, savings and loan societies or other depositories.

XV .- A MOUNTAIN OF GOLD. "That is a funny name for a witch," said Buster John, as Mr. Rabbit paused and began to nod.

"Yes," continued Mr. Thimbienner,
"Yes," continued Mr. Thimbienner,
"nothing in the world but gold. Those who had money held onto it as long as they could, because they didn't know how much scarcer it would be, and those who didn't have any were willing to sell whatever they had for half price in order to get some.

"It was lots worse than playing dolls—lots worse. When children play make-bedieve with dolls, they soon forget about ft, but when grown people begin to play malle-believe with money, they never get over it. The wisest men get their heads turned when they begin to think and talk about money. They have forgetten that it was all a make-believe in the beginning."

"Yes," remarked Mrs. Meadows, "I feel a little sleepy myself, but I'll try to keep awake for the sake of appearances."
"Don't mind me," said Mr. Thimbledneer, with meck politeness. "Go to sleep if you want to, you two. I don't have to talk so loud."
"Well. in the country I was telling you

"Well, in the country I was telling you about, there was a young man who had saved some money by working hard, but he didn't save it fast enough to suit himself. He thought so much about it that he would stop in the middle of his work and sit and study about it for an hour at a

"Which name was that?" inquired Mr. Thimblefinger.

"Why, Mummy-Bummy Big Money," replied Buster John, elevating his voice a little.

"Well, it's very simple," remarked Mr. Thimblefinger. "'Mummy-Bummy' was to catch the ear of the animals, and 'Big-

"Dat's so," said Drusilla. "Kase time you say 'money' folks'll stop der work an' lissen at you; an' ef you say 'Big-

"It's very curious about money," continued Mr. Thimblefinger. "I don't know whether you've ever thought about it much—and I hope you hayen't—but it has pestered me a good deal, this thing you call money."

"It's mighty bothersome," assented Mrs. Meadows, "when you are where people use it, and when you have none except what you can beg or berrow. Thank goodness! I'm free from all that bother now."

poodness! I'm free from all that bother own."
"Yes," said Mr. Thimblefinger, "I don't see that people have much the advantage of the animals, when it come to using money. I've seen grown people work night and day for a few pieces of metal."
"Why, of course!" cried Buster John. "They can take the pieces of metal and buy bread and meat to eat and clothes to he had the same dream. He had the same dream the next night, and the morning after the first person he saw was an old man who had stopped to rest on the doorsteps. This old man would have been like other old men but tor one thing. His beard was so long that he had to part it in the middle of his chin, pass it under each arm, cross the wisps on his back and bring them around in front again where the two ends were tied together with a bow of red ribbon.

"'How are you; my young friend, and how goes it?' said the old man, smiling pleasanty. 'You took as if you had been having wonderful dreams.'
"'So I have, grand sir,' replied the young man.

"Well, a dream isn't worth a snap of your finger unless it comes true, and a dream never comes true until you have dreamed it three times."

"'I' have dreamed mine three times, grand sir, and yet it is impossible that it should come true."
"'Nonsense! Nothing is impossible. Tell me your dream."
"So the young man told the old man

"Nonsense! Nothing is impossible. Tell me your dream."
"So much the more wonderful," remarked Mr. Thimblefinger. "What do the people who have more bread and meat and clothes than they can use want with the pleces of metal?"
"So they may buy something else that they haven't got," said Buster John.
But Mr. Thimblefinger shook his head.
"It' puts me in mind of a tale I heard once about a poor man who was the richest person in the world."
"But that couldn't be, you know," protested Buster John.
"Anyhow, that's the way it seemed to me in the story," replied Mr. Thimblefinger. "But the story is so old-fashioned it would hardly peas muster now. Besides, they tell me that there's not enough metal to go round, people have begun to make up their minds that pieces of paper with pictures on them are just as good as the metal and perhaps better. It's mighty funny to me."
"What was the story," asked Sweetest Susan. "Please tell us about it."
"Why, yes," remarked Mr. Rabbit.
"Tell us about it. If calamus root passes current with some of my acquaintances and catnip with others, I see no reason why people shouldn't play make-believe was a pretty high one considering it was of solid gold."

"Sure enough gold?"-asked Sweetest Susan.

"Pure gold," replied Mr. Thimblefinger.

"The old man lander his skiff at a convenient place, and the two got out and went to the mountain, or hill, of gold that rose shining in the middle of the small island. The actions of the young man showed that he considered himself the proprietor of both deland and mountain. He broke off a chunk of gold as big as your fist, weighed it in his hand and would have given it to the old man, but the latter shook his head.

"You refuse it?" cried the other. 'If it is not enough I'll give you as much more.'

"You,' replied the old man. 'Keep it for yourself. You own me nething. I could have carried away tons of the stuff long before I saw you, but I had no use for it. You are welcome to als much as you can take away with you.'

"As much as I can take away!" exclaimed the other. 'I shall take it all.'

"But how?"

"It is all mine! I am rich. I will buy me a ship.' He walked back and forth, rubbing his hands together.

"Then you have no further need of mie?" said the old man.

"Not now—not now,' replied the other with a grand air. 'You won't accept pay for your services, and I can do no more than thank you.'

"The old man bowed politely, got in his skiff and sailed away. The other continued to walk about the island and rub his hands together, and make his plans. He was now the richest man in the world. He could buy kings and princes and empires. He had enough gold to buy alt the ships on the sea and to control all the trade on the land. He was great. He was powerful.

"All these thoughts passed through his mind and he was very happy. The sim mind and he was yery happy. The sim the land. He was great. He was powerful.

"All these thoughts passed through his mind and he was very happy. The sun looked at the young man a long time and then went to bed in the sea. Two little grav lizards looked at him until the sun went down, and then they crawled back in their holes. A big blackbird sailed round and round and watched him until nearly dark, and then sailed away.

"When night came, the young man found the air damp and chilly, but he knew he was rich, and so he laughed at the cold. He crept close under his mountain of gold, and, after a long time, went to sleep. In the morning he awoke and found that mobody had taken away his precious mountain of gold during the night. The sun rose to keep him company, the two gray lizards crept out of their holes and looked at him, and the big blackbird sailed round and round overhead.

"The day passed, and then another and of tropical South America. A level and mossy spot of earth, surrounded by bushes which make it secluded, is selected, and this must also be clear of sticks and stones. The birds all assemble around this area, when a "Cock-of-the-Rock," dressed in his vivid orange and scarlet plumage, with a flaming crest, steps into the center, and, with spreading wings and tail, begins a series of movements as if dancing a minuet; finally, carried away by excitement, he leaps and gyrates in a most astonishing manner, until, becoming exblackbird salled round and round overhead.

"The day passed, and then another and another. The young man was hungry and thirsty, but he was rich. The night winds chilled him, but he was rich. The midday sun scorched him, but he was rich exichest man in the world. Every night, no matter how hungry or weak he was, he crept upon the side of the mountain, and stretched himself out, and tried to hux it to his bosom. He knew that if he was hungry, it wasn't because he was poor, and if he died, he knew he would dirch. So there he was."

"What then?" asked Buster John, as Mr. Thimblefinger paused to look at his watch. "Well, I'll tell you," continued Mr. Thimblefinger, holding the watch to his ear. "One fine morning this rich young man was so weak that he couldn't get up. He tried to, but his foot slipped and he rolled to the foot of the mountain of gold and lay there. He lay there so long and so quietly that the two gray lizzards crept close to him to see what was the matter. He moved one of his fingers and they darted back to their holes.

"The rich young man lay so still that the big black bird, sailing overhead earne."

He moved one of his fingers and they darted back to their holes.

"The rich young man lay so still that the big black bird, sailing overhead, came nearer and mearer, and finally alighted at a respectful distance from the rich young man. The two gray lizards came out again and crawled cautiously toward the rich young man. The big black bird craned his neck and looked, and then went a little closer. A sudden gust of wind caused the rich young man's coat to flap. The gray lizards scrambird towards their holes, and the big black bird jumped up in the air and flew off a little way.

"But presently they all came back, bird and fizards, and this time they went still closer to the rich young man. The big black bird went so close that there is no telling what he would have done next, but just then the old man came running toward them. He had united the two ends of his beard and was waving them in the air as if they were flags. The big black bird flew away very angry, and the gray lizards ran over each other trying to get to their holes.

"The old man tied up his beard again."

time that he was the richest man in the world."

"What time is it?" asked Mr. Meadows, seeing that Mr. Thimblefinger still held his watch in his hand.

"A quarter to twelve."

"Ah," cried Sweetest Susan, "we promised mamma to be back by dinner time."

"There's plenty of time for that," said Mrs. Meadows. "I do hope you'll come again. It rests me to see you."

The children shook hands all around when Mr. Thimblefinger said he was ready to go, and Mr. Rabbit remarked to Buster John:

"Don't forget what I told you about Aanon."

"Don't lorget what Aaron."

There was no danger of that, Buster John said, and then the children followed Mr. Thimblefinger, who led them safely through the spring, and they were soon at home again.

Cleaning Colored and Black Silks.

Place each piece of slik on a smooth, clean table and dip a wad of the material into the cleaning fluid, which should consist of equal parts of alcohol and lukewarm water, writes Emma M. Hooper in the March Ladies' Home Journal. Cold among themselves and say that pieces of metal and pieces of paper are worth something. In this business, people have a great advantage over us. They can put figures on their pieces of metal and paper and make them worth anything, but with us a joint of calamis root is worth just so much. It has been worth that since the year one, and it will be worth that on to the end of things. Just so with a twist of catnip. But tell us the story—tell us the story. I may drop off to sleep, but if I do, that will be no sign that the tale isn't interesting."

"Well," said Mr. Thimbiefinger, "once tipon a time there was a country in which money became very scarce. The people had a great deal, but they hid it in their stockings and in the clinks of the chimneys was that other countries close at hand made their money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and sell them and carry the money of the same kind of metal, and they'd bring, their goods in and se

DANCING RAILS.

The rails, a species of bird common to Europe and North America, are great performers. First, one gives three powerful cries, one immediately after another, and to this invitation the others reply by note. In a few moments all the badden guests arrive in the open space and the performance is begun instantly. It is nothing short of a tremendous screaming concert. One long, piercing shrick is succeeded by a tower note from another bird, and this is repeated several times and followed by calls resembling half-smothered cries of pain and moans of anguish. While screaming they rush madly, about with outsiretched wings that beat the air violently, and with their long beaks wide open. This exhibition shown in the picture sats three or four minutes, after which the assembly breaks up peacefully.

A FROLICSOME FINCH.

Don Felix de Azara, a Spanish general THE COCK-OF-THE-ROCK-DANC if from a Special Contributor.]
In reading books of natural history we meet with numerous instances of birds assembling at the same spot to indulgs in anties and dancing performances, with providing the accompaniment of music,

Don Folix de Azara, a Spanish general and naturalist, describing a small finch, which he aptly names Oscilador, says that and neturalist, describing a small finch, which he aptly names Oscilador, says that early and late in the day it mounts up vertically to a moderate height; then files off to a distance of twenty yards, describing a perfect curve in his passage. Turning, it files back over the imaginary line it has traced, and so on repeatedly appearing like a pendulum swung in space by an invisible thread.

The display of the lap wings, called by the natives of La Plata its "square," or "serious dance," requires three performers. The birds indulge in it all the year round, and at frequent intervals during the day, and also on moonlight nights. One bird leaves his mate and approaches two others who welcome him with notes and signs of pleasure. Advancing to the wistor, they place themselves behind him, and all three, keeping step, begin a rapid march, uttering resonant drumming notes in time with their movements; the notes of the pair behind being emitted in a stream like a drum-roll, while the leader utters loud single notes at regular intervals. The march ceases, the leader elevates his wings and stands erect and motionless, still uttering loud notes, while the cader utters and downward until the tips of their beaks touch the earth, and sinking their voices to a murmur, remain for some time in this posture. The performance is then over, and the visitor returns to his own ground and mate, to receive a visitor himself there later on during the dance.

MAGPHES JOKERS.

MAGPIES JOKERS.

The chief amusements of magpies and lackdaws are their thieving habits and love of mischievous tricks; but their cousin, the jay, is the most persistent practical joker in the feathered world. He loves to hide in a clump of bushes near a spet where many birds are enjoying themselves with a concert or dance, and to frighten them almost to death by screaming like a hawk. Of course they scatter in all directions, and the little wretch who has caused the disturbance, sits still and cackles to himself with apparent delight. He has another nasty habit, too, which is to visit the nests of birds smaller than himself and to amuse himself there by breaking the eggs or tearing the young birds to pieces with his bill in the absence of their parents. Sometimes he becomes such a nulsance that the birds often combine their forces and drive him out of the neighborhood.

(Lowell:) Christ built no church, wrote no book, left no money, and erected no monuments; yet show me ten square miles on the whole earth where Christianity is not, and where the life of man and the purity of woman are respected and I will give up Christianity.

(Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst:) I am not one who thinks that there is a great danger in materializing heavenly things. You cannot read the apocalyptic description of the New Jerusalem without feeling that with its wails and gates, its avenues and mansions, it will be as substantial an affair as the original Jerusalem. When we try to spiritualize matters beyond a certain point we get into the region where the ordinary polarities do not work, and no data are left us from which to calculate our mental latitude and longitude. A world that is simply a spirit world is not a world that we can either think about with any safety or that we are qualified to have any particular interest in. There is no warrant in scripture for thinking that the more unlike this world you imagine a thing to be, the more heavenly it is. Christ was somewhere before he was here, and there is no ground for supposing that that "where" is essentially unlike any other "where." Human choirs will not become angelic choirs by undertaking to sing falsetto. Heaven is undoubtedly a locality. The first paradise, which was certainly an exceedingly commendable paradise, was hausted, he retres, and another bird takes his place.

Mr. Bigg-Withers relates, in his book called "Ploneering in South Brazil," that one morning in the dense forest his attention was aroused by the unworted sound of a bird singing—songsters being so rare in this district that he noticed the motes particularly. As soon as his guides caught particularly. As soon as his guides caught the sound, they begged him to follow them, saying that he would be sure to witness a very curious sight. Cauthously making their way through the dense undergrowth of the forest, they came in sight of a small stony piece of ground at the end of a beautiful glade. On this spot were assembled a number of little birds about the size of tom-tits, with lovely blue plumage and red topknots. Some were upon the stones, some upon the shrubs and bushes, an one, perched quite high on a twig, was The first paradise, which was certainly an exceedingly commendable paradise, was a locality and there has been in the meantime no such change in the constitution of our nature as to indicate that a paradise that is not local would be any improvement upon the original.

WHEN SHALL I MEET MY YOUTH AGAIN?

Sometime—I know not how or when—
This weary road I journey on
Will lead through lands that I have known,
And I shall meet my youth again—
Thro' some old wood my childhood knew
The road, at length, will bring to view
A cottage in a lonely gien,
Where I shall meet my youth again.

Where I shall greet beside the gate A boy whose unforgotten face Will glad me with its tender grace Of artless life and love elete; My soul will sparkle in his gaze The while his sunburnt hand I raise Against my lips in silence, then, Where I shall meet my youth again.

And yet the lad of whom I dream
May know me not, for I shall be
To him a deep ning mystery
Of things that are and things that seem;
From these old scars of time and toil
His heart, albeit, may recoil,
As children's often do from men,
Where I shall meet my youth again.

And creep into my arms and weep,
As I shall lull his lids to sleep
With stories of the changed past;
And ere the morning breaks upon
Us twain, our souls shall be as one,
And time shall breathe a soft "Amen"
Where I shall meet my youth again.

the top, and as in most places I could not touch the rcck, I soon began to spin slowly sround, which did not add to my comfort. I shall never forget the first sensation of the moment. Though I was positive that there was little or no absolute danger, ye 't was in some way far from feeling secure. Suppose that the strands of the rope should wear away by the friction against the sharp edge of the cliff, or that in some way B—— should for a moment lose his hold, or, if this or that—and then I would "brace" and try and think of something else. First, just the bare wall of the overhanging cliff and then a momentary view of the surrounding country and then a hurried look below me where I now caught a glimpse of the nest on a broad fat ledge still some ways down. Thus I must have gone down a hundred feet, and was just congratulating myself upon an approach to at least temporary safety, when I suddenly heard, close at hand, a tremendous flapping of wings, and the next moment I received (set seemed to my excited senses) at least a score of heavy blows on the head and shoulders, accompanied by several fearful

Here, fortunately, the small gnaried trees were thick, affording us a means of support.

In the meantime we had only noticed one of the eagles, a monstrous bird that slowly sailed around only a little above our heads, but had not as yet shown any signs of hostility. My friend now proceeded to tie one end of the rope securely around my chest; then, running the other end around a stout scrub, he braced himself firmly and stood ready to "pay out the rope as needed. Thus secured against any probable accident, I carefully made my way down to the edge of the cliff and fired my revolver. Directly the other eagle came soaring out from the cliff and began circling around, giving vent to shrill screams or whistles! We both now concluded that probably the birds would not venture to attack us, and so B—— got ready to lower me over the edge. If the birds should not prove hostile everything pointed to success, for Mr. B—— is a man of great strength and the rope) was warranted. So, first seeing that my bag was secured and revolver in easy reach, I gave him the word and in another moment was dangling in the air. I at once found that the cliff shelved in almost trees.

We were well provided for all emergencies, having in the buckboard in addition to a plentiful supply of food and robes, our rifes and revolvers, several hundred feet of rope, a pair of climbing irons and a prospector's bag.

As our destination was distant thirty-five miles, and the mountain roads, at no time the smoothest, were then badly cut up by spring freshets, we drove through only as far as a "camp" just beyond the mountains and "put up" for the Light. The next morning we took an early start and, with better roads and fresh horses, traveled the few remaining miles in a couple of hours, and about 9 o'clock came in sight of the nest. The "cowpuncher" had, indeed, spoken the truth in saying that the eyrie was bard to approach.

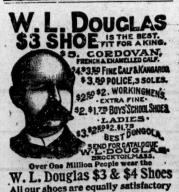

A huge "butte" rose 500 or 600 feet up from the plain, its sides so steep as to be almost precipitous, while on the side nearest a creek which we had followed for several miles, was a limestone cilf sheer up and down for about three hundred feet. About half way up its face on a ledge was the nest, a great black object, the contrasted strangely with its yellowish-white background.

JOHN WESLEY'S LOVE STORY.

A STRANGE ROMANCE OF THE EARLY DAYS OF GEORGIA-WOOED, WON AND JILTED.

A Storm at Sea-Love Under a Palmetto Tree-Wedded to the Church_A Hitherto Unpublished Episode in the Life of the Founder of Methodism-Sophia Canston's Tragedy.

(From a Special Correspondent.)

In an old library of the South where these were the ordinary experiences of the and papers have been stowed away early missionaries. so and appears have been stowed away we centuries has been unearthed a ge story; nothing more nor less than we life of John Wesley in Georgia. It strange history of passion, of self-nings, of the tyranny of the early ous conscience, of sorrow and re-Wesley, the prescher, the mission.

religious conscience, of sorrow and resolve. Wesley, the prescher, the missionary, the founder of a church, is the last man from whose breast one would have expected to wrench such a secret, and yet, when all's told, it presents his character in no light new or unfamiliar.

This is the tale. When James Oglethorpe salied westward to become Governor of a colony peopled with convicts and the flottam and jetsam of the London workhouses, he took John Wesley with him as a civilizing influence. Wesley was then a young man of brilliant parts, a fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, on £300 a year; handsome, pure and Quixotic, His brother, Charles Wesley, was the Governor's secretary.

The ship was delayed by storms and the passengers were thrown upon their own esources for entertainment. The most inpassengers were thrown upon their own resources for entertainment. The most interesting person on board, so far as John Wesley was concerned, was Miss Sophia Canston, niece of one of the fortune-hunters whom Oglethorpe had induced to follow him to the new world. This was not only because young women were few on board the colonial vessel, but because this young woman was extremely attractive. She was beautiful. She was lighly educated, She sang with a voice that fascimated him, And, most potent of all, she listened with fastering interest to his preaching. The two became friends. She sang Charles Wesley's paalms with him, and listened to all he had to say about experimental feligion. Gov. Oglethorpe was well pleased with the turn affairs were taking and used every means to throw the young people together.

One day a terrific storm arose. The masta were broken. Everybody began to pray. The Germans on board sang solemnity on while the waves were beating at the ship as if to tear it to pieces. Then it was that John Wesley cried out in an agony of doubt: "Am I ready to meet my God?" And Sophia Canston, standing hear, looked up at this noble, soul-stirring evangelist and thought "If not he, then who of all on board this fated craft?" In these seasons of doubt, while Wesley was experiencing what his blographies term his new birth, the touching brayery of the young girl who had made the long journey desired to pursue that study. Amid the noise of the rice-birds the fort of Savannah was raised and Wesley built his parsonage and schoolhouse.

Mr. Canston, Sophia's uncle, was made chief magistrate and store-keeper, and his niece made herself quite charming as Wesley's pupil in French and an earnest seeker after the exquisite pleasures of experimental heimess.

At this time John Wesley wrote to a friend: "I find myself as neither desired nor expected—indulging in honors and in ease and abundance. Strange school for one who hatti but one business, to exercise himself unto holiness, nudi nudum Christum sequi."

Sophia was the official belle of the place. She and John Wesley were the most conspicuous figures in society, and were opnoquently thrown together very frequently. Gov. Oglethorpe looked upon the affair as settled, and so did the people of the colony. Oglethorpe wished to see it settled because he wished to keep Wesley at Savannah, instead of letting the young missionary wander off, as had been his original intention, to preach to the Indians. Wesley and Delamotte taught shoot, preached and held lovefessits, and in the evening sang psalms. Mr. Delamotte taught shout forty children to "read, write and cast accounts." At night when the candles burned and their work was done, and the still woods about them gave back no echo to their voices, Mr. Wesley had the women and young men meet at the church for a severer catechism of their Bibles. The few hours ledt from this teaching he spent partly in studying German with Bishop Nixchma, teaching Greek to Mr. Delamotte, helping Charles Wesley with his sermons and reading French with Sophia Canston. There are pretty word pictures in these old letters of the two young people, stting together under the trees in the public park or walking dogether to the lovefeasts in the evening. One can ase the tail, lithe figure of Wesley, priestrobed, clarest-faced, thrilled with a first, strange, human love.

But he was the very last person to see himself in the situation. He kept himself unite busy, built a parsonage, in which be lived in the stern, pleasureless, methodical way which afterward gave a name to his religion, and he rendered up the account of his meager expenses to the honorable trustees of Georgia. He visited Fredrica often to preach to the settlers there. He studied, the Indian language, still in-inspect of going among them. At times he slept upon the ground, and when morning came discovered his clothes to have been frozen to the earth, as well as his long, abundant hair. MISS WILLARD

HOW I LEARNED THE BICYCLE-WITH SOME REPLECTIONS BY THE WAY.

AS A BICYCLER

One of my companions in the tribula-tion of learning the bicycle and the grace of its mastery was a tall, bright-faced, vigorous-minded young Celt who is devo-ted to every good word and work, and has had much experience with the "submerged tenth," living among them and trying to build in character among those waste places of humanity. I set out to teach this young woman the bicycle, and while she took her lesson which, as she is young, elastic and long-limbed, was vastly sees difficult than mine, we talked of many things: American women and these were the ordinary experiences of early missionaries.

But now came the crisis of the human side of the story. Oglethorpe determined to hasten matters between Wassley and Miss Camston. Accordingly he made a dinner at his own house, and drimaidl, his foreign servant, tampered with the Cypress wine, but whether by a general direction or not was never quite clear to Mr. Wesley.

In the evening Sophia Canston was there, and the general had her sing for them some old tove songs of England and Sootland, and shatches from the operas in London. She danced, too, and recited and completely overwhelmed the pious youth with her beauty and accomplishments.

That night, under the palmetto trees near the Governor's house, with the darkeyed, handsome girl beside him, and with her entracing voice in his ears; with the Cypress wine and Grimaldi's decoction hot of many things: American women and class and why they are less vigorous than the Irish; the English girl of the slums and why she is less self-respecting than an Irish girl in the same station.

"There are many things for which we cannot account," said my young friend, whereupon, with the self-elected mentorship of my half-century, I oracularly observed: "Cosmos has not a consequence without a cause. It is the business of reason to seek for causes, and if it cannot make sure of them, to construct for itself theories as to what they are or will turn out to be when found. But the trouble is when we have framed our theory, we forget that after all it is but an opinion, and we come to look upon it as our child that we have brought into the world, nurtured and trained up by hand. The curse of life is that men will insist on bolding their theories as true and imposing them on others. This gives rise to creeds, customs, constitutions, royalties, governments. Happy is he who knows that he knows nothing, and holds his opinions like a bouquet of flowers in his hand that sheds its fragrance everywhere, and which he is willing to exchange at any moment for one fairer and more sweet, instead of strapping them on like an armor of steel and thrusting with his lance those who do not accept his views."

He advocates cycling as a remedy for

He instances two cases 14 and 18 years of age, where a decided increase in height could be fairly attributed to cycling. We are often asked if riding a wheel is Lot the same as running a sewing machine. We will let the same doctor answer this question. He says: "Not at all. Women, at least, aft erect on a wheel and consequently the thighs never make even a right angle with the trunk, and there is no waste of blood in the lower limbs and genitalia. Moreover, the work 'tself makes her breaths in oceans of fresh air. While the woman at the sewing machine works indoors, stoops over her work, contracting the othest and almost comple ely checking the flow of blood to and from the lower half of her body, where at the same time she is increasing the demand tor it there, finally aggravating the whole trouble by the pressure of the lower edge of the correct against the abdomen, so that the customary congestions and displacements have good cause for their existence."

"The great desideratum in all recreations is pure air, plenty of it, and lungs free to absorb it," any Dr. Lyman R. Sperry.

I noticed that the great law, which I believe to be dynamic throughout the universe, made no exception here: "According to thy faith be it unto thee." was the only law of success. When I felt sure that I should do my pedaling with judicial accuracy and did not permit myself to dread the swift motion round a bend; when I formed in my mind the image of a successful ascent of the "Priory Rise;" when I fully purposed in my mind that I would not run into the hedge on the one side, or the iron fence on the other—these prophesies were fulfilled with practical certainty. I fell into the habit of varying my experience by placing before myself the image, so germain to the work in which I am engaged, of an inebriate in action and accompanied this mental panorama by an orchestral effect of my own producing, "they reel to and fro and stagger like a drunker man." But I could never go through this three consecutive times without lurching off the saddle. But when I put before me, as distinctly as my powers of concentration in would permit, the image of my level-headed mother holding steadily before me a pair of balances, and looking at me with that quizzical expectant glance I knew so well: "Do sit? Of course you'll do it. What else should you do?" I found that it was palpably helpful in enabling me to "sit straight and hold my own" on my uncertain steed. She always held, in the long talks we had concerning immortality.

pably heipful in enabling me to "sit straight and hold my own" on my unocertain steed. She always held, in the long talks we had concerning immortality, that the law I mention was to her mind conclusive, and whe was wont to close our conversations on that subject (in which I held the interrogative position) with some such remark as, "if Prof. Huxley thinks he is not immortal, he probably is not; if I think I am, I may be sure I shall be, for is it not written in the law "according to thy fatth be it unto thee."

Gradualy I realized a consoling degree of mastery over "Gladys," but nothing was more apparent to me than that we were not yet thoroughly acquainted—we had not summered and wintered together. I had not learned her kinks, and she was as full of them as the most spirited mare that sweeps the course on a Kentucky racetrack. Although I have seen a race but once (and that was in the Champs Elysees, Paris, a quarter of a century ago,) I am yet so interested in the fact that it is a "Flora Temple," a "Goldsmith Maid," a "Maud 5," that should be first on the record, that I would fain have named my shying steed after one of these, but as she was a sfit from Lady Henry Somerset this seemed invidious in me as a Yankee woman, and so I called her "Gladys," having in view the bright spirit of the donor, the exhiliarsting motion of the bleycle, and the gladdening effect of its acquaintance and use on my health and disposition.

A Plan to Make Their Shipment Less Risky.

Congress Proposes to Regulate the Shipment of Dynamite and Nitro-glycerin.

The Half-forgotten Crime of the Dy-namite Flend Alexander Keith. How it is Proposed to Proceed.

WASHINGTON, March 1 .- (Special Correspondence.) The half-forgotten crime of Alexander Keith, the dynamite fiend, is Arexander kerth, the dynamite need, is recalled by a recent investigation undertaken under an act of Congress by the Treasury Department. The subject of the investigation is the shipment of high and low explosives as freight on steamers plying between the United States and foreign countries. Keith's crime was the prime cause of the adoption of stringent regulations by the great nations of Europe, and it is proposed now to put a law through Congress which shall embody the safeguards to be found in the laws of Keith was a shipper of merchandise who planned ingeniously torob the insurance companies. He had a good business standing which enabled him to operate without exciting suspicion. He had cases of explosives shipped to the port from which he intended to make a shipment of merchandise of great value, and then, having inserted a clockwork device in the case of explosives, so timed as to explode midway of the vessel's journey, he reshlipped the case on the vessel on which the merchandise was to go. This merchandise he insured for much more than its real value. His scheme, of course, was to cause an explosion which would sink the ship in midocean, causing the inevitable loss of the goods he shipped, on which he could then collect insurance. He had no regard apparently for the possible—in fact, the inevitable loss of life to accompany the execution of his plan. Whether the plan was ever put into practical execution no one will ever know. At about the time when Keith was unmasked by a chance of discovery a number of vessels were missing. It is supposed that Keith's infernal machine sent them to the bottom, but this can never be proved. Keith committed suicide shortly after the occurrence which laid bare one of his plans.

It was a costly exposure which occurred Keith was a shipper of merchandise who planned ingeniously torob the insurance chine sent them to the bottom, but this can never be proved. Kelth committed suicide shortly after the occurrence which laid bare one of his plans.

It was a costly exposure which occurred on the 11th day of December. Kelth had shipped a chest filled with explosives to New York, and it had been returned. It was to be reshipped at Southampton (as he confessed before his death) with a clockwork attachment set to cause an explosion in eight days. The contents of the chest, it was estimated, was about 1000 pounds of eithofracteur. This chest was being taken aboard the Mosel at Bremerhaven, when it slipped from the carriers' hands. Instantly there was a terrific explosion. More than 100 people were killed, and many others were injured. A hole thirty fest in diameter and eight feet deep was torn in the stone pavement. Parts of the decks of the Mosel and the tug Simoon was felt ten miles from the scene, and the noise of it was heard fifty-five miles away. The revelations connected with the case filled the civilized world with horror. The mations of Europe took the matter up immediately. Laws were passed restricting the shipment of cases of explosives, regulating the packing of them, etc. The regulations were really a good thing for the trade in explosives, because before their adoption there was a great distaste for this class of freight among carrying companies, and the rates were almost prohibitive. The new restrictions remove these prejudiges. Since they were put in force the rates of freight among carrying companies in the old days. They frequently refused to underwrite vessels which carried explosives as freight of late years as freely as they have taken any other class of matter. They found that under proper restrictions there was no great danger in doing this, while, if they refused to accept the explosives as seed, they were concealed in other freight and shipped as oil. An explosive known as "tonite" was disquised as a wine and 2-ipped as such. In other cases passengers were found carrying explosive have not biosives in Cruiks, wind were checked through to their destination, or in traveling bags or bundles, which they carried in their hands. Since the adoption of stringent regulations, it is said, not one life has been lost in Great Britain by promature explosion, and not $25 worth of damage to railroad property has been done. The regulations have been in force since 1875.

The regulations have been in force since 1875.

A great disaster, which occurred only fifteen months ago, is quoted in favor of the nactment of restricting laws by the Congress of the United States. One of the restrictions proposed applies to the amount to be imported in one cargo. Much more than the amount proposed to be allowed was in the hold of the steamer Cabo de Machesacoa, which took fire November 3, 1893, in the port of Santander, Spain. Santander was the capital of a Spanish province, and it contained 50,000 inhabitants. When the dynamite in the hold of the vessel exploded it destroyed one-half the city, killed 300 persons and damaged every vessel in the harbor. Parts of the steamer were blown into the heart of the city, and there set fire to buildings. All of the fifty tons of dynamite did not explode, for when divers were sent to the bottom of the harbor to investigate the wreck, there was another explosion, causing a further less of hife.

All of the fifty tons of dynamite did not explode, for when divers were sent to the bottom of the harbor to investigate the wreck, there was another explosion, causing a further loss of life.

There is legislation on the statute-books now, but it is ridiculously obsolete. It applies to explosives not now in use and has no application to many which have been invented since the law was passed in 1856. A section of the present law makes it manslaughter to import high explosives in passenger conveyances, but as the high explosives designated in the law have been obsolete for many years, the conviction of an offender under it would be difficult, if not impossible. One section provides that these obsolete explosives shall be packed in metallic vessels, surrounded by plaster of paris and marked "Nitro-Stycerin, dangerous." Now modern science has discovered that there is no more dangerous method of packing any high explosive than that described in this law. At the time this law was passed, the exuding of nitro-glycerin from the package was thought to be the source of the greatest danger. But it has been shown that the greatest danger is from the liability of the explosive to freeze, and as it freezes at about 54 deg.. Fahrenheit, and could not be more dangerously encased than in metal cylinders.

The great need for some legislation on the subject of the transportation of explosives lies in the fact that a new use is being developed for them—a commercial use which may be quite as important as the use now made of them in mining. It is proposed to use them in place of steam, and all that has been needed was the dispovery of some way of bridling their great power so that they would not destroy rather than serve. This has been accomplished in a crude way in England and a ram has been worked there with explosives to furnish the power.

The legislation proposed by the Treasury Department to be enacted by Congress is based on the English law and foliows the English clasification in almost every particular. Explosives are to be classed as gunpowders, nitrate mixtures, nitro-compounds, chlorate mixtures, fulminates, ammunition and fireworks. No one who is not familiar with the manufacture and sale of explosives could have any idea of the great variety in which they are to be found. Many of them are named after the inventors; others have names derived from the Greek and Latin, from words descriptive of their properties. Some of these which are to be designated in the proposed law are colonia, westsome of these which are to be designated in the proposed law are colonia, westfallke, orissite, glukodine, scranine, diaspon, matazietis, sebastine, rhesite, porifera, paleine, pleura, nitasons, dia-fyamur, romit, tounite, titan, victorite, punshon, lithstite, hontite, etnite, inline, xyloiddine, Viel, schneibalite, callow, xyloglodine, bronolithe, xyloidine, meganite and dualine. It is to be provided in the proposed law that no explosive shall be imported by any one not having an importation license to be issued by the Secretary of the Treasury. No vehicle or wagon in which explosives are imported is to contain more than 4000 pounds, and if in trains, the vehicles are to be separated by at least seventy-five feet. Each is to carry a black flag three feet square. All inland vessels carrying explosives are to carry black flags, and all sea-going vessels red flags to indicate that they have explosives aboard. No boat is to carry more than 50,000 pounds of explosives, and no railroad car more than 10,000 pounds; and all railroad cars containing explosives are to be separated from other cars similarly loaded by three other cars, empty or filled with non-combustible merchandise. There are to be regulations to control the packing of explosives of different classes. These regulations are to apply to all packages containing more than five pounds, but any traveler is to be permitted to carry five pounds with him for private use. The importation of nitro-glycerin on a railway car is prohibited under penalty of $2000 fine in the proposed act. Any violation of the regulations is to be punished by a fine of $500 or less, and a further fine of $0 cents for each pound of explosives, to be assessed against the master of the vessel carrying the importation and the license. These provisions are in the proposed law are colonia, west-falike, orissite, glukodine, scranine, dia-much like those of the English law. The French regulations are somewhat similar, but they go into details concerning the identity of the importer, etc., which are characteristic of French law. The importer is to tell, for instance, how much explosive he wishes to import, the use he desires to make of it, the precise spot where it is to be used, the exact route by which it is to reach that spot. After these and many other things are stated, the applicant is referred to the Chief Engineer of Mines or the Chief Engineer of Bridges and he determines whether a license shall issue. In Germany the regulations are a matter of local determination. Austria has very stringent regulations and so has Norway and Sweden paper, sprinkle it on both sides with magnesia, place a second piece of paper over it, put away between the leaves of a book for three days, then shake off the powder, when the lace will be found perfectly clean. Laces are given a creamy hue by putting strained coffee or powdered saffron in the rinsing water until the right cream or ecru tinge is procured. White silk laces are soaked in milk over night, then soused in warm soapsuds, rinsed and finally pulled out and carefully pinned down while damp. Laces must be soused, gently squeezed and clapped between the hands until dry or nearly ss. They may be whitened by letting them stand covered with soapsuds in the sun, repeating the operation several times.
